Warrings' Income Put At $238,000 For 3 Years

13 Tell of Spending
Defense Attacks Sum
Assails U.S. Tax Agent 'Figures Out of Air'

Carroll Bailey Jailed

CARROLL BAILEY, "independent" District numbers operator, was given six months and fined $5,000 on income tax charges in Baltimore yesterdy. Page 16.

Warring's Income

Knotting about the Warring gang and their income tax experts the final strands of its evidence that they conspired to defraud the Treasury, the Government yesterday placed their income from the numbers racket at $238,000 in three years.

Thirteen witnesses told of Emmitt Warring's expenditures as District Attorney Pine and Assistant District Attorney Wilson moved swiftly toward conclusion of their case today.

Defense attorneys struck their first blow to free the defendants with a vigorous attack on H. Watson Leese, internal revenue agent who calculated the Warring incomes and the taxes due the Government.

"Figures Out of Air"

"You draw those figures out of the air," William B. O'Connell, of counsel for the Warrings snapped when Leese said that to other expenditures by Emmitt Warring he added $10,000 for living expenses.

Long and bitter argument by the defense to persuade Justice Laws to order the jury to free all five defendants is due as soon as the Government rests today. The Government has shown heavy spending by the Warrings and asks the jury to infer from this that the Warrings made the huge profits it claims. The defense will claim that as a matter of law this is no proof at all.

Leese returned to the stand yesterday afternoon to explain how his division calculates what a person's income is. He clashed repeatedly with defense lawyers, who questioned his methods. He took the money other witnesses have testified was spent by Emmitt Warring, 33-year-old "brains of the numbers gang," and figured from this what Emmitt's income must have been, if he started the racket with nothing, as has been testified.

Held Equal Partners

The record contains many statements by Emmitt and his brothers—Lee Paul, 35, and Charles (Rags), 30—that they were equal partners—that "when we made $2 each of us got $1." So, said Leese, he figured that the others got as much as the expenditures showed was taken out of the $2,000,000-a-year racket by the head man.

In 1934, Emmitt Warring filed an individual income tax return for $10,685, and paid taxes on it. Leese said his income must have been $23,511, on which the Government was entitled to $2,538 in taxes. That, said Leese, was if Emmitt "lived on air." But if he were supposed to have spent $5,000 on living expenses his income was that much more and the tax due the Government was $3,604.

The Warring income return for 1935 was filed as a partnership of "commission brokers." It reported $3,600 of income, split three ways, on which was paid a total tax of $54.

Helpful Wife's Friend Is Held

White Plains, N. Y., Nov. 22.—Renewed examinations moved Westchester County authorities tonight to withdraw a tentative verdict of suicide and intensify investigation into the automobile gas death of Eugene Y. Burckhalter, 47, which his wife is accused of aiding.

Meanwhile, Melvin Kittel, 34, salesman, former Californian and college graduate who was her friend of long standing, was arrested and held in $2,000 bail as a material witness.

"This case is wide open," said Assistant District Attorney Elbert T. Gallagher after the graying, 44-year-old widow was formally charged with first degree manslaughter and held in $10,000 bail. Aiding a suicide constitutes manslaughter under New York law.

County medical examiner said the case was carried on his records as "death by carbon monoxide poison."

Checks Forged, Marine Clerk Ends His Life

Shoots Self in N. Y. Dies as Wife Phones Treasury Probes Acts

A frantic telephone call from his wife in Washington yesterday failed to prevent James F. Foley, civilian employe of the Marine Corps, from shooting himself in a New York City hotel.

Foley left Washington hurriedly Monday after evidence was found that he had forged pay and mileage vouchers and Government checks issued upon them.

His body was found on a bed, clad in underwear. A bullet was through his heart and a revolver was by his side when hotel employes rushed to his room after his wife's call.

John Abbot, assistant manager of the Hotel New Yorker, said that Mrs. Margery Foley told him she had just received a call from her husband saying that he was going to kill himself.

According to the Treasury Department on Monday the General Accounting Office notified the Marine Corps paymaster's office, where Foley was a pay clerk, that there were evidences of forgery.

Secret Service agents were called, and they learned from Mrs. Foley that her husband had left hurriedly at noon Monday. He said he was going to the Marine base at Quantico, Va. He never reached there.

After the phone calls yesterday were climaxed by the one which informed Mrs. Foley that her husband had shot himself, Mrs. Foley collapsed at her home.

Couple Escape As Mad Sniper Strikes Anew

Tries to Leap on Car
Description Tallies
Killer Still at Large

In the vicinity of Montgomery County's petting lanes a colored man last night attempted to stop the car of a young couple in a manner so similar to that of the sniper who has terrorized the Rock Creek Park area recently that police were convinced the mad killer was stalking his third murder victim.

On the East-West highway near the Jones Mill road not far from the scenes of the Rock Creek Park murders the man approached a car in which the couple was driving slowly. The colored man held up his hand and commanded the driver to halt.

Four Suspects Held

Terrified lest he or his companion be the next to die in a fusillade of shots from the sniper's automatic pistol, the young man speeded away. About an hour later he reported his experience to the Sixth Precinct police, who did not take the names of the couple because they were too frightened to recall the man's appearance.

Police said they were unable to give any information of value to the army of searchers that last night patrolled the sniper's territory except one grim fact—that the mad killer still is at large.

Four suspects were still being held for investigation.

Crippled Woman Dies in Flames as Frame HomeBurns

A 50-year-old crippled woman was burned to death yesterday as firemen fought futilely to save her from flames which gutted the two-story frame dwelling in which she lay with her legs hopelessly paralyzed.

The woman, Diana Jackson, colored, was alone in her house at 4414 Lane place northeast, and flames had gained such headway when firemen arrived they could not enter the dwelling.

Later in the day fire broke out in a closet at the Petworth School, Eighth and Shepherd streets northwest. Little damage was done, but homeward-bound traffic was snarled for almost an hour.

Experts Doubt Age Pensions Can Be Kept Self-Supporting

Ultimate collapse of any effort to keep the old-age benefit system on a self-supporting basis was indicated yesterday by revelation that, under the plan for determining benefit payments, thousands of individuals can take advantage of old-age compensation to buy annuities at a fraction of insurance company rates.

This situation arises from the fact that the old-age benefit system favors certain classes, such as persons entering the system at high ages, women and all individuals with low average earnings.

President Roosevelt's program for greatly liberalized old-age benefits and providing for such things as survivor benefits to widows and children admittedly will make it necessary for the Government to subsidize the old-age plan to the extent of paying one-third more of the cost out of general tax revenues.

The inevitable tendency of favored persons to try to "gyp" the plan in order to build up credits for fat annuities at ridiculously low cost is a factor, however, which experts have worried over for some time.

Here are a few examples of the way certain individuals can take advantage of old age compensation:

A shopkeeper 55 years of age, whose wife is of the same age, can incorporate his shop and put himself and his wife on the pay roll, say at $3,000 a year, the maximum insurable wage under the social se-

Short of Aim, Chest Head Urges Giving

Lacks One-Fifth
Cites Human Needs
Cash Unimportant
Holds Lives Are

Community Chest Director Herbert L. Willett, jr., made a personal appeal last night to save a campaign for funds for Washington's needy that threatened to fall short of its goal at today's final report meeting of workers.

More than one-fifth of the goal of $2,127,000 remaining to be collected "should be measured not in dollars but in human lives," Willett declared.

Increase 3 Per Cent

An addition of 12,827 pledges for $91,863 yesterday added a mere 3 per cent to the campaign total. Workers up to last night had collected 157,387 pledges for $1,690,575 or 79.45 per cent of the objective.

"Bring in, send in, mail or telegraph your pledges," Willett pleaded.

"If you expect one of the volunteer solicitors to call upon you, have your pledges ready, and make it generous, please," he said. "If you have not been asked for a pledge, do not hesitate, but bring or mail in your gift to the Community Chest campaign headquarters, Room 232, in the Willard Hotel."

William J. Flather, campaign chairman, also broadcast a message to all volunteer workers and givers. The "volunteer" army should maintain its discipline and continue its drive up to the very last minute, he said, and dare not relax in efforts to put the campaign over.

"If you have canvassed your own neighborhood, if you have met your goal for the human needs of your city, don't let down now, but telephone your campaign chairman and offer your services in some other district, or with some other unit, he urged all volunteers.

"When a disaster of great force strikes a large number of our people at one time we rise to great heights in providing money and clothing and aid of all kinds," said Earl Nash, vice chairman of the committee on volunteer publicity, as he broadcast an urgent appeal from Station WJSV last night, asking immediate response from those who have so far failed to give or have given inadequately.

Cites Floods

"The great devastating floods in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys in 1936, and the even more recent New England hurricane, are prime examples of the response of the American people to a call for help and assistance.

"Isn't it a bit ironical—a bit unfair, that we have to have a public slaughter on a mass basis before we can stir so many of our citizens out of their lethargy?"

Hundreds of people in Washington and nearby Virginia and Maryland will in the coming year face crises and disasters in their lives no less real and no less tragic than floods, fires and earthquakes, Nash emphasized. The financial support now asked through the Community Chest may mean the difference between life and death, between hope and desperation.

The governmental unit was leading, with 84.40 per cent of the unit quota reported yesterday, while the metropolitan unit was a close second with 83.6 per cent.

Alvin W. Hall, chairman of the governmental unit, addressed a strong appeal to his keymen in the

Stock Yards Set To Keep Open Despite Strike

Chicago, Nov. 22 (AP).—The management of the stock yards today announced operations would be continued despite a strike of C. I. O. unionists.

Under an agreement with the Packing House Workers Union, the 60,000 cattle, sheep and hogs herded into the corrals since the walkout yesterday morning were sold. Clerks and commission men, their white collars muffled under heavy coats, guided the stock to slaughter houses.

Charles R. Rice, president of the Chicago Live Stock Exchange, said he had entered into an agreement with the union to permit commission men to feed and water 10,000 incoming animals tomorrow.

No peace parleys were arranged. An estimated 375 union members left the yards after they ceased work, leaving a few pickets.

Rail Shippers Hit Mergers, Barge Lines

Urge Reorganizations
Want Laws Relaxed
Prompt Action Asked
Waterways Assailed

By Robert C. Albright.

Abandonment of Federal rail merger plans and freedom from "unfair" Government barge line competition were demanded yesterday by the Transportation Conference of 1938.

Concluding a two-day session on carrier problems, representatives of railroads, shippers and other business and transportation interests asked a freer hand for voluntary rail consolidations and co-ordinations, in the interest of economy, better service and "reasonable competition."

The meeting, called under United States Chamber of Commerce auspices, referred all proposals for Federal financial aid to a special sub-committee rescinding earlier action in favor of Government rail equipment loans.

Prompt Action Urged

President George H. Davis of the Chamber of Commerce adjourned the conference after the group had urged legislation to facilitate rail reorganizations and other prompt action "in the interest of sound transportation policy."

President Roosevelt's informal committee of railroad and labor executives meanwhile planned to resume conferences here next week on a comprehensive program of rail legislation acceptable both to rail employer and employe interests. The committee expects to work out a plan in time for early action next session.

Yesterday's transportation conference at the Chamber of Commerce favored repeal of legislative requirements for a comprehensive consolidation plan of balanced rail systems, and abandonment of the elaborate plan worked out by the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1920.

Forced Mergers Opposed

"The rail carriers should be permitted, subject to approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, to bring about such voluntary consolidations and co-ordinations as will result in economies, assure adequate service and preserve reasonable competition," read the resolution proposed by the shippers and approved by the conference.

J. J. Pelley, president of the American Association of Railroads, added that "compulsory consolidations are not in order now." He said the conference also opposed proposals for a new Federal authority of three members to develop rail-merger proposals.

"If the railroads are given an opportunity to work out the consolidation problem as it should be worked out, in a feasible, practicable manner, they will do it," Pelley said. "That way you would get some progress."

Barge Line Sale Demanded

The conference recommended flatly that Congress require the Government to dispose of the Federal barge lines on the upper and lower Mississippi, the Warrior River and the Missouri River "to private parties."

Pelley said the $25,000,000 Government-operated barge lines, by "unfair competition with private business and rate undercutting, have

Pronounced Dead, Sailor Reappears, Collects His Pay

Somerset, Mass., Nov. 22 (AP).—Bernard Zastrow, who said he was pronounced dead a year ago while a member of the crew of the S. S. Pan Amoco, walked aboard that vessel today and demanded pay due him at the time he was covered with a sheet and placed aboard a Coast Guard plane off Nassau last November.

Capt. George R. Christianson, skipper of the Pan Amoco, blinked and gulped when he saw him walk aboard the ship.

Zastrow related that when he was placed upon the plane as dead, attendants noticed signs of life and gave him a stimulant. They then rushed the seaman to a Miami, Fla., hospital where he spent two and a half months recuperating.

Captain Christianson paid him off up until the time he "died."

A Nazi Threat

By Ralph W. Barnes
Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Nov. 22.—"Schwarz Korps," organ of the elite S. S. guard, warned tonight that eventually the German Jews would be wiped out by the Nazis "with fire and sword" unless foreign countries solve the problem of getting them out of the country and settled abroad.

The editorial in which the warning appeared was one of the most violently worded to appear in a Nazi newspaper since Reichsfuehrer Hitler was elected in 1933.

Seek to Absolve Selves

Thus, among other points, this newspaper, which speaks for the black uniformed guards under the command of Heinrich Himmler, chief of the whole police organization of the Reich, seeks to shift to the outside world the responsibility for the security even of the lives of the half million which compose German Jewry. Charging the democracies with weakness, Schwarz Korps writes: "The threats of these countries are the same as they used to be, but since the days of the Czech crisis, they do not have any more weight than that of a pasteboard sword."

The appearance of this editorial coincides with the opening of the Nazi authorities' new "hate campaign" intended to mobilize the whole German people back of the current anti-Semitic terror.

The keynote speech in this drive to stir up greater hostility to the Jews was delivered by Propaganda Minister Goebbels at the Kroll Opera House before an audience composed largely of Nazi propaganda leaders assembled from throughout the country. Doors were closed to the public.

[Goebbels declared that Nazis will "stick to their guns" on the Jewish problem, the Associated Press said.

Won't Abide "Tutelage"

[The meeting was the first of a series of 1,500 anti-Semitic demonstrations scheduled during the next few months.

[Goebbels coupled his attacks on Jews with yesterday's debate in the British House of Commons, when Germany's policies were criticized, and warned:

["If the English want to conclude a binding friendship with the German people, they should not make this friendship dependent on inner political German circumstances.

["The German nation today no longer will put up with interference and a governess-like tutelage."

Hull Expected To Reject Reply Of Japanese

Unsatisfactory, He Says
New Note Predicted
China Monopoly Feared

By the Associated Press.

In an effort to break a diplomatic deadlock with Japan, the United States State Department appeared to be preparing yesterday to send a new note to Tokyo insisting that American rights in China be observed.

Japan's reply to an earlier American note, which demanded the maintenance of the open door and complained that Japan was trying to monopolize Chinese trade, was characterized yesterday by Secretary of State Hull as unsatisfactory.

The Japanese reply had rejected all major contentions in the earlier American note and declared that "ideas and principles" of the past no longer applied to the Chinese situation.

Dictator Feared

Hull said yesterday that the Japanese communication conflicted with the general position the United States has taken throughout its history.

Officials acknowledged that it was the implications in Japan's remarks about past principles and about the creation of a "new order" in eastern Asia that troubled them most. Observers have interpreted the remarks as an indication that Japan expects to dictate conditions under which foreigners shall live and foreign business be carried on in China.

Although Japan promised equality of economic opportunity in China,

Dr. Dieckhoff Leaves After New U.S. Protest

German Envoy Glum
Note Sent to Nazis
Warning on Americans

The German Ambassador, Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, officially took his leave from America in an atmosphere of strain yesterday as this country was protesting to his government against any application of its latest anti-Jewish decree to American citizens in the Reich.

Summoned home to report on the angry reaction in this country to Germany's campaign against minorities within her borders, the ambassador called on Secretary of State Hull to say good-by, and emerged from the Secretary's office a bare couple of minutes later, his customary smile gone and with an apparent air of glumness. He made a brief farewell call, also, on Undersecretary of State Welles. The ambassador is expected to sail for home Friday, though he said yesterday he did not know his exact time of departure.

To Confer With Wilson

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt said at Warm Springs, Ga., that he would confer on Sunday or Monday with Ambassador Hugh R. Wilson, who has been called home from Berlin for report and consultation on the German persecutions. Wilson will confer with Secretary Hull immediately upon his arrival from Germany, then will hasten to Warm Springs.

Only a few hours before Ambassador Dieckhoff's call, the Secretary disclosed the American Em-

Chamberlain and Halifax Off To Paris for Defense Talks

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 22.—Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Halifax, of Great Britain, tonight headed for Paris for a three-day state visit, during which they will confer at length with French government leaders upon matters of mutual defense.

Developments leading up to the conference included these:

French Premier Daladier forestalled attacks on his economic decrees by threatening to postpose the Anglo-French conversations and convene Parliament for a vote of confidence test.

Germany and France exchanged good-neighbor assurances as the new French ambassador to Germany presented his credentials to Reichsfuehrer Hitler, but these assurances were merely oral—not written, as had been expected—as a result of French parliamentary opposition to the Nazi anti-Semitic drive.

The apparent indifference of Reichsfuehrer Hitler toward British appeasement plans and the German drive against Jews pushed Germany's colonial claims off the agenda for the Anglo-French talks.

French labor leaders decided to carry out instructions for a nation-wide strike Saturday, involving 5,000,000 workers, to protest

U. S. Aid Urged For Profit Sharing Plans

Publisher Advocate An Unemployment Cure Testifies to Senators

Government encouragement of industrial profit sharing system was favored as an unemployment cure yesterday before a special Senate committee studying "incentive taxation."

Walter D. Fuller, president of the Curtis Publishing Co., said failure of tax laws to permit a greater depreciation charge-off was partially responsible for "delayed recovery" and declared more liberal tax treatment of employers would make for wider employment.

Fuller's views on incentive taxation were at odds with Monday's testimony by Marion B. Folsom, of the Tastman Kodak Co., who said he thought taxes should be levied for revenue only.

Fuller said there are "obviously possibilities for the use of tax incentives as direct aids in relief of unemployment."

"I think the most important thing we could do would be to get the workers back to work and then put more money in their pay envelope," the publishing company executive said.

The committee heard three other executives outline profit-sharing systems in their own business—Charles P. McCormick, Baltimore extract manufacturer; George M. Verity, chairman of the board of directors of American Rolling Mill Co., and W. G. Marshall, vice president of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co.

McCormick, the last witness, outlined principles of "Multiple Management" described in his book by that title and practiced in his company's Baltimore plant.

A Change in Philosophy

"The philosophy of the Nation is changing and the question of profits for stockholders only is passing," McCormick told the committee. "People who work in the plants expect a share in its profits."

The youthful executive said he believed "that the day of the one-man business has passed, and declared "dictatorial" practices in business were partly responsible for slow recovery from the depression.

When Senator Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, asked him what in his opinion was at the root of labor troubles, he said he believed "mismanagement was somewhere in the background."

McCormick said "multiple management" systems had been adopted by more than 200 companies in this country and 22 in England. He told how the system worked in his company, with a junior board of directors recruited from the more promising young employes, operating along with a senior board of directors, and with similar boards set up in factory and sales divisions.

Verity told the committee most workmen prefer "some plan that gives them their fair share of results as they go along, rather than to wait for a distribution of 'profits,' which they do not understand at the end of some definite period.'

"They prefer a direct reward and continuity in the payment of their compensation, whatever it may be," Verity said.

The Ohio steel executive said he thought old yardsticks of hire and fire "are gone never to return, as co-operative effort is now essential to modern industry."

"In our experience," Verity said, "we have always felt that actual profit sharing as such—that is, sharing in net earnings at the end of a considerable period—should only be applied to those responsible for management, whose work can only be measured by final results."

Explains the System

Marshall explained the Westinghouse wage adjustment system, which he said was a "loss sharing" as well as a "profit sharing" plan, but has opertaed to the benefit of both management and employes. Wage adjustments are made up and downward as quarterly earnings rise or fall from $600,000. He said the plan added 10 5-6 per cent to wages in 1936 and 13.3 per cent in 1937.

Fuller in his earlier testimony proposed co-operative studies of profit sharing plans with the National Association of Manufacturers and the United States Chamber of Commerce. He advised against any standard formula for all industries or occupations. Fuller also urged careful studies of the possibilities of incentive taxation, in co-operation with the American Institute of Accountants and the Controllers' Institute of America.

Senator Herring said the committee hopes to demonstrate that increased industrial efficiency results from profit-sharing plans. He said evidence collected by the committee's investigator indicates that such plans actually raise profits.

He said "there would be more profits" if all employes of a company were thinking about profits, instead of "only one man."

"If the committee can demonstrate to industrial leaders that profit-sharing will boost their profits I think it will have done a good day's work," the committee chairman said.

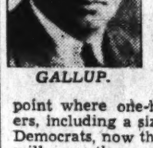
G. O. P. Victory in 1940 Seen by More Election Returns Changed Many Opinions

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Nov. 22.—Republican successes in the recent election have brought about a striking increase in the number of voters who think the G. O. P. will win the Presidency in 1940.



GALLUP.

Nation-wide surveys taken by the Institute twice in the past year and repeated again today show that belief in a Republican victory has grown to the point where one-half of the voters, including a sizable number of Democrats, now think the G. O. P. will carry the country in 1940.

A year ago less than one-third of the voters had any such faith in a Republican comeback.

This bolstering of confidence in the political future of the G. O. P. seems to spring from a widespread belief that a trend or swing away from the Democrats is in process. The comment most frequently made by voters who think the Republicans will win in 1940 is that "the election November 8 showed the tide is that way."

The Institute's surveys, taken in September, 1937; April, 1938, and today, asked voters the question: "Which party do you think will win the Presidential election in 1940—Democratic, Republican, Socialist, or some other party?"

A trend is clearly evident in the following comparison of the replies:

	Persons expecting victory For Democrats	For Republicans
September, 1937	69%	31%
April, 1938	60	40
Today	50	50

Only a small handful of voters mentioned the Socialist Party or some other party as a likely winner.

While it is impossible for the public to judge clearly the factors that may prove decisive in an election two years off, nevertheless the survey is an interesting index of the relative feeling of confidence which the rank and file of voters have in their respective parties.

For example, the survey a year ago found the Democratic rank and file supremely confident about the party's future prospects, while the Republicans were much less certain about the possibilities for their party. Today's survey, however, finds the Republicans much more confident of victory in 1940 than the Democrats. Almost one-third of the Democrats actually believe the Republicans will win.

There are also some Republicans who think the G. O. P. will still be out in the cold in 1940, but the percentage of these Republican "doubters" is much smaller than the percentage of Democratic "doubters:"

Republican voters saying Republicans will win	83%
Republican voters saying Republicans will lose	13
Democratic voters saying Democrats will win	69%
Democratic voters saying Democrats will lose	31

A year ago the Democrats were almost unanimous in the belief that their party would continue in office in 1940. Approximately 90 per cent thought this, as compared to 69 per cent today.

While the election results played their part in influencing opinions about 1940, nevertheless other factors were also mentioned by the voters. Many said they felt "the public wants a change from time to time," or "people get tired of the same party."

Those who think the Democrats will continue to stay in office in 1940 declared, chiefly, that the Democrats have built up an organization which "can't be torn down as early as 1940." Others declared that even if the election is close, the "party in power gets the breaks."

Lawyers for U. S. Urged to Attend More to Careers

Attorneys employed by the United States were urged yesterday to pay more attention to their chances of finding career services in the Government.

Thomas M. Ross, of the Chief Counsel's Office, ICC, told the Federal Bar Association at its weekly luncheon that Federal lawyers seemed much less aware of their professional problems than were professional men otherwise. He discussed the association's recent report on the extension of classified civil service to the Government attorneys, saying that one of the immediate problems was in laymen superiors overseeing and judging the merits of work performed by attorneys.

He thought the practice detrimental, and believed, also, that some improvement should be made in civil service registers, permitting the placing of specialized men into specialized jobs. South Trimble, of the Commerce Department, will address the luncheon at its meeting next Tuesday.

Postal Employes To Have Day Off After Christmas

Christmas Day falls on Sunday this year, but Postoffice Department employes are going to spend a day at home with their families the next day under orders of Postmaster General Farley.

Star routes will operate on regular schedule, but there will be no city delivery, village delivery, rural delivery or window service in post offices on December 26, except for delivery of gift parcels, according to a message from the Postmaster General in the Postal Bulletin, daily paper of the Postoffice Department.

"It is not intended that delivery of gift parcels shall in any way prevent postal employes from spending December 26 with their families," the message said, adding packages should be mailed early in order that deliveries may be made by midnight, December 24.

Rise in October Auto Industry Credited Against Season Trend

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Labor Perkins announced yesterday that 248,000 persons returned to private jobs in non-agricultural lines in October. Employment of this type has shown a contra-seasonal pickup for three consecutive months, she added, and 900,000 persons have gone back to work since July.

"Weekly pay rolls of factories rose more sharply than employment," Miss Perkins said. A gain of 3.3 per cent indicated an increase of approximately $5,100,000 in weekly wage disbursements to factory workers.

Auto Gains Best

"The outstanding employment gain in October was in the automobile, body and parts industry in which approximately 85,000 workers were returned to jobs."

The Secretary said in answer to a question that the national employment figure in October was 34,400,000, compared with 37,000,000 in September, 1937, and about 38,000,000 in September, 1929.

At the same time, WPA officials said they expected to have available soon a new estimate of WPA enrollment which may assist them in ordering reductions so they can keep within their budget.

Officials said, however, they had no definite plans to dismiss any WPA employes.

Meanwhile, the Council of the International Chamber of Commerce made public a letter asking the governments of its member countries "to work out with the least possible delay a policy of friendship in the economic field."

The letter, signed by Thomas J. Watson, of New York, president, included a resolution adopted by the chamber's council.

Collaboration Urged

"At present, whether rightly or wrongly," the resolution said, "nations believe that their safety and well-being are threatened by the policies of other nations. Policies based on suspicion and fear must lead to progressive isolation and distress. . . .

"Whatever justification can be found for present trends of policy in present circumstances, no one denies that greater well-being for all would result from collaboration."

Secretary of State Hull said, in another trade front, that conversations had been undertaken with Peru for a trade agreement. He added, however, that the conversations had not reached the stage of negotiations.

Trade agreements already have been concluded with 10 of the 20 American republics.

The State Department also announced the signing of a provisional commercial agreement between the United States and Greece November 15. It contains general provisions for nondiscriminatory treatment with regard to tariff rates and other forms of trade control.

Upholds Business Freedom

Baltimore, Nov. 22 (AP).—Benjamin M. Anderson, jr., economist of the Chase National Bank of New York, said today governmental economic planning in the United States would necessitate complete centralization of government.

"Democracy and local self-government must be done away with, if there is to be any real governmental economic planning," he said in an address prepared for delivery at Johns Hopkins University.

"Democracy and free enterprise have grown together. Individual rights, protected by the courts, cannot be permitted to hamper the economic plans of the Government.

"The recent reconstitutions of government in Italy and Germany point the way—if we wish to pursue it."

The best regulator of economic activities, he insisted, was the open market place.

Pointing to the extension of governmental controls and direct state entry into economic activity in Germany, he cited recent figures from an official source showing German taxes and social contributions last national income and that, counting year absorbed 33.5 per cent of the other public profit-making enterprises, two-thirds of the national income flowed through the hands of and was redistributed by the state.

In the United States, he observed, Federal, State and local governments' expenditures in the 1935-37 period averaged 26 per cent of the Nation's income, compared with 15.5 per cent in the years 1928-30.

Memorial Group To Act Soon on Foundation Bids

A meeting of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, probably this week, will be scheduled today to consider bids for the excavation contract, Representative Smith, secretary, indicated yesterday.

Meantime engineers of the National Park Service, business agent of the memorial commission, neared completion of their report and recommendations on the contract award.

Lowest lump sum bidder for the job is the Raymond Concrete Pile Co., which offered to do the work for $384,900, but the dozen or more alternative proposals must be considered before the contract can be awarded. Four other firms submitted bids.

Senate Disbursing Office officials said yesterday they had written George L. Berry, of Tennessee, that a recent $222 check constituted final payment to him as a Senator. Berry had expressed belief he was entitled to the office and its emoluments until his successor, A Tom Stewart, of Winchester, took the oath of office.

Berry served by appointment from Gov. Gordon Browning. Stewart was elected November 8 to succeed him. Officials said Stewart's name went on the pay roll November 9, and that the $222 check sent Berry paid him for the period through November 8.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—A conference of Eastern and Southern Democratic committeemen which inquired into the reasons for the party's losses in the November 8 elections was concluded today, and National Chairman Farley completed plans for similar talks with Western leaders in Chicago next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Summing up the conference, Lawrence W. (Chip) Robert, secretary of the national committee, remarked smilingly:

"We wanted to find out where those bricks were thrown from."

One subject of discussion was the recently launched campaign of Mayor LaGuardia of New York to unite "the progressive forces" of the country. A City Hall spokesman said the Mayor was consulting with other progressives on the advisability of bringing pressure on the Democrats to make their party the progressives' "medium of expression."

Indianapolis, Nov. 22 (AP).—The Indiana Supreme Court granted a temporary writ of prohibition today barring recounts sought in seven counties by Raymond E. Willis, Republican candidate for United States Senator, who was defeated in the November 8 election by the Democratic incumbent, Frederick Van Nuys. The court set December 5 for a hearing on whether the temporary writ should be made permanent.

Georgia to Get No More Funds, President Says

Objects to State Law Direct Loans Illegal Must 'Co-operate'

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 22.—President Roosevelt told a press conference today the State of Georgia was the only State in the Union which had failed to co-operate with the Federal Government on public works.

He added Georgia, which he has frequently called his "other home," would not receive one cent more from the Federal Government for public works until it had amended its constitution to permit it to borrow directly from New Deal agencies, as other States do.

The Georgia matter arose after the President had told reporters he had no news of national or international interest and the only appointment he had so far for his two weeks' stay here was with Hugh R. Wilson, Ambassador to Berlin. Wilson, summoned home for consultation and report on anti-Jewish measures in Germany, will come here Sunday or Monday after seeing Secretary Hull.

U. S. "Soft-Hearted"

Asked whether Gov. E. D. Rivers of Georgia was coming here to confer on a Federal loan for an insane asylum at Milledgeville, the President said he thought that had been consummated with the RFC.

He said the Government had become soft-hearted again in arranging this indirect loan to get around the State prohibition against borrowing from the Federal Government, but would never do it again.

Gov. Rivers was not available in Atlanta for immediate comment on the President's remarks. Georgia at present has a constitutional provision against increase of its bonded debt except "to repel invasion, suppress insurrection or defend the State in time of war."

The conference here with Wilson, the President said, would follow the ambassador's conferences in Washington with Secretary Hull on his arrival from abroad.

Makes No Appointments

As for prospects of a conference with Congressional leaders on the program for the new Congress, Mr. Roosevelt said he had not made a single appointment for anybody.

He said he had given no thought to appointments, Supreme Court or any other kind.

Asked whether Paul V. McNutt, high commissioner to the Philippines, had asked to be relieved of his post, he replied McNutt was coming home in January; whether it was for good he didn't know.

Inspects School

The President this afternoon drove his own car around the Foundation and inspected a new school and hospital going up for the infantile paralysis patients here. He also dropped by the special Marine encampment of 60 officers and men brought here from Washington and Quantico, Va., to provide a Presidential guard. The commanding officer, Lieut. Col. Charles T. Brooks, of Washington, told him the Marines would put on a special drill Sunday for the resort children. The president also motored around his 1,000-acre farm near here.

Dry and Wet Opinion Split About Youth

More Drinking Charged Officials Deny It Data Submitted

The question of whether American youth is drinking more stirred up a sharp controversy here yesterday.

Allied Youth, Inc., described as a "national movement for alcohol education," said that there was "an extensive, growing use of alcoholic beverages by high school youth." W. Roy Breg, executive secretary, said the statement was based on the results of a survey among 4,000 high school seniors in 13 communities in 11 States.

Leonard V. Harrison, research director for the Distilled Spirits Institute, expressed the opinion that young Americans were drinking far less than they did in prohibition days. He said that the survey of Allied Youth, Inc., was "meaningless," since it gave no basis for valid comparisons between conditions today and before repeal.

Football Games Cited

The three members of the local Alcohol Beverage Control Board—George Offutt, chairman; Isaac Gans and Mrs. Agnes Mason—all agreed that there was less drinking among young people today than in the prohibition days.

"This is noticeable at football games," Mrs. Mason said. "During prohibition it was considered fashionable to take along flasks. I feel sure that there is less of that now."

Chairman Offutt recalled that before repeal there was considerable bootlegging at the local high schools.

"Thought It Was Smart"

"Young people thought it was smart to drink then," he said. "Like their elders, they felt they were defying and helping to end a unpopular law. We have a law now that strictly forbids the sale of liquor to minors. Of course, they have ways of getting it, but I don't believe that they have the same desire young people had before repeal."

The ABC officials granted that anything they said could only be an expression of opinion, but they thought this opinion was well fortified by Police Department figures on arrests. These showed that the number of persons between 17 and 21 arrested for intoxication in the last fiscal year was the lowest since 1924 notwithstanding a large increase in population in that period.

Arrests of persons 17 to 21 for the last 16 years follow: 1922, 166; 1923, 220; 1924, 269; 1925, 339; 1926, 332; 1927, 414; 1928, 390; 1929, 368; 1930, 353; 1931, 384; 1932, 308; 1933, 361; 1934 (first repeal year), 433; 1935, 422; 1936, 292; 1937, 336; 1938, 262.

Revenue from liquor to the District now is running around $2,000,000 a year.

Alcatraz Convicts Deny Killing Guard In Escape Attempt

San Francisco, Nov. 22.—Convicts Rufus Franklin and James C. Lucas, charged with murder of an Alcatraz guard, told from the witness stand today of their futile attempt to escape from prison, but denied they hammered the guard to death.

Guard Royal C. Cline, each said, was in his office the afternoon of May 23 when they and Thomas Limerick climbed out the window of a prison shop and walked into gunfire of a tower guard. Limerick was killed.

The convicts said they didn't know of the attack on the guard until after their dash for freedom had failed, declaring any one of six others in the shop might have killed Cline.

Prisoners Silent On Deadly Drink

Lansing, Kans., Nov. 22 (AP).—Silence of 20 ailing felons tonight stalemated Warden Kirk Prather's investigation of a "drinking party" that killed three Kansas State Penitentiary inmates.

The convicts refused to tell who stole two jugs of an alcoholic soap compound from the prison engineer's office and played host to a party that sent 25 prisoners to the penitentiary hospital.

The dead: Glen C. Roy, 35; Monroe Adams, 31, and J. B. Harris, 41.

17 Million in U.S. Bonds Taxes Are $10,000,000 Just One Share of Oil

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—A net estate of $26,410,837—some $17,000,000 of it in government bonds—was left by John D. Rockefeller, founder of one of the mightiest of all fortunes.

This was disclosed in a transfer tax appraisal filed today. Attorneys estimated that after the payment of Federal and State levies the estate would amount to some $10,000,000.

The share of New York State in the fortune was estimated at $4,616,467 and of the Federal government at $12,245,000.

In all the securities left by the capitalist there was but a single $43.94 share of stock of the vast Standard Oil enterprise which he had fashioned many years ago.

Rockefeller's holdings once were estimated at close to $1,000,000,000, but in his last year he was 97 when he died 18 months ago—he had confined his activities substantially to giving away vast sums. To the world's philanthropic agencies he had donated $530,800,000.

In addition, he had settled money on his descendants, feeling, as he explained in his will, that it was "wise to place upon my children the responsibility of owning and administering substantial sums."

With this explanation that other heirs already had been provided for, he left almost of the whole of the remaining estate in trust for a granddaughter, Mrs. Margaret Strong de Cuevas, wife of a Spanish marquis who maintains an American home in Lakewood, N. J.; her two children, and the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

John D. Rockefeller, jr., received personal and household effects worth $33,678. In a statement which accompanied announcement of the division of the estate, he said that to his best knowledge his father had "at no time during his life made any transfers or created any trusts in contemplation of death or intended to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after death."

Japanese Hold Fall of 2 China Cities 'Imminent'

Shanghai, Nov. 22 (AP).—Japanese forces in central China have consolidated their Hunan and Kiangsi provincial fronts, military and naval spokesmen said tonight, and the capture of Changsha and Nanchang, provincial capital, is "imminent."

The spokesmen brushed aside Chinese reports that the western wing of this front had been rolled back across the Sinkiang River, 46 miles north of Changsha.

The eastern wing was reported 30 miles north of Nanchang, in Kiangsi.

The Japanese spokesmen said the outstanding development in south China was the taking over of Chinese customs at Canton.

Chinese reports said a great counter-offensive toward Canton had reached within 3 miles of the city.

FBI Checking Mystery Death At Fort Myer

Ballston Mechanic Held Soldier's Skull Crushed Army Board Puzzled

The Federal Bureau of Investigation yesterday was trying to unravel mystery surrounding the death of Private Guy Y. Keeler, 32, of Battery B, Sixteenth Field Artillery, Fort Myer. Arlington County police held a young mechanic for a court hearing in the case Friday.

The man held is Henry Douglas Trammell, 23, of 4218 North Fairfax drive, Ballston, who is said to have had a fight with Keeler several hours before the soldier was found unconscious on the Fort Myer reservation.

Keeler died without regaining consciousness at Walter Reed Hospital. Last night examination showed his death was caused by a fractured skull.

Investigators learned that Ralph Liming, of 6707 Eighth street, North Arlington, had taken Keeler from Ballston, where the alleged fight occurred, to the Fort Myer barracks. Liming said he last saw the soldier about 6 o'clock Sunday night, but Keeler was not found until 11 o'clock and then several hundred yards from his barracks.

Fort Myer officers said it would have been impossible for Keeler to lie where he was found for three hours without having been discovered, but so far they have been unable to learn his movements from the time Liming said he left him until he was found.

Liming, who is not being held, told Arlington police he saw Trammell knock Keeler to the pavement in the fight at Ballston. He said the soldier had been drinking.

Husband Declares Bette Davis Cares More for Career

Los Angeles, Nov. 22 (AP).—Another Hollywood career has triumphed over marriage.

This was the basis of charges made in a divorce complaint against Bette Davis, filed today by Harmon O. Nelson, 31, actor's agent and former band leader.

The actress last night announced their "martial vacation" would end in the divorce court.

Nelson's complaint charged his wife "had become so engrossed in her profession that she had neglected and failed to perform her dudties as a wife and has been inattentive, casual and distant . . ."

P. U. C. Against Making Old Cars Into 1-Man Type

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday refused the Capital Transit Co. permission to convert 50 two-man street cars to one-man type.

The commission reaffirmed its position taken more than a year ago on a similar request. At that time it said:

"Any further additions to the fleet of one-man cars should be brought about only through the acquisition of cars equivalent or superior to the president's conference car (the streamlined model)."

The company in its request for the change said it would realize a saving of $39,500 yearly in wages. In addition, one-man cars, have a uniform location of entrance door, eliminating much confusion, the company said.

Ministers Ask Marriage Wait In Arlington

Seal Campaign Begins
Offices Will Close
Lena English Dies

Arlington County.
Bureau of The Post, Clarendon, Va.
Tel. OXford 0500.

Reports that nearby Virginia counties plan to reap a marriage harvest from the District of Columbia and Maryland when the Free State's delayed marriage law becomes effective December 8 brought emphatic protest last night from the Arlington County Ministerial Union.

The union made it clear that whatever hopes might be entertained of profiting from the new Maryland law and the District's requirement of three days' delay between issuance of license and marriage were not being entertained by members of the clergy.

Referring to newspaper articles, the union said these "might easily give the casual reader the impression that clergymen in charge of Arlington churches were engaged in activities improper for men of their profession."

Ask for Delay

In a resolution adopted unanimously, the union "renewed" a request "to the representatives of Arlington County in the Legislature that they will support" a delayed marriage law for Virginia. The resolution expressed "disappointment" at the failure of the last Legislature to enact such a law.

At the same time, the union expressed "hearty" approval of the law permitting "civil marriage of persons who do not wish a religious ceremony."

C. Benjamin Laycock, Arlington County clerk of court, was commended by the group for his conduct of the office "with dignity and propriety," expressing the "hope that he will continue to make it the policy of his office that no marriage licenses shall be issued other than during regular office hours, except in cases of real emergency."

Seal Campaign Begins

The mailing of 10,000 Christmas seals launched yesterday the annual campaign of the Arlington County Tuberculosis Association.

The association has tried to get one letter to each family. If any family has been missed, Mrs. E. C. Butterfield, president of the association, asks that they communicate with Mrs. Norbert Melnick, county chairman in charge of the drive for funds.

"Protect Your Home From Tuberculosis" is the slogan of this year's Christmas seal campaign.

The drive will continue until Christmas.

Police Investigate Strange 'Gas-Chamber' Death

almost completely wrecked one road and damaged many bigger ones."

"We don't care what they do with them, but we want them given up," the Association of American Railway Executives president said. "The Government shouldn't have gone into it in the first place. Now they should get out."

Lines Blame Competition

He said the Mobile & Ohio Railroad blamed its receivership on Federal barge line competition. Roads adversely affected by the barge competition, he said, include the Illinois Central, the Southern Railway, the Louisville & Nashville, the Gulf, Mobile and Northern and the Missouri Pacific.

Arthur M. Hill, president of the Atlantic Greyhound Corp., said the first question on the agenda, changes in the Interstate Commerce Commission's rate-making powers, was referred to a subcommittee because the subject was too intricate and controversial for so short a conference. Hill said another meeting of the conference will be called before Congress convenes, when subcommittees will report.

A broader subcommittee study of proposed Federal emergency aid to the railroads also was ordered, after the conference had approved only one point on the program—equipment loans to the roads. Approval was later withdrawn, without prejudice, and the whole subject turned over to a subcommittee.

Trustee Law Opposed

To facilitate reorganization of railroads, the conference recommended:

"Legislation to permit a carrier and its stockholders and creditors to secure approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission of a plan of reorganization which, when so approved, may be made promptly effective against minority interests by a bankruptcy court, without the appointment of a trustee."

Other recommendations of the transportation conference:

Power of eminent domain should be given over small minority stock interests in consolidations approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Railroads should be relieved of the expense, in excess of net direct benefits to them, for reconstruction of railroad bridges in connection with navigation or flood-control projects.

Legislation should be adopted requiring more expeditious disposition of rail abandonment applications.

Monday the conference recommended that all business be relieved of the undivided profits tax, urged repeal of land-grant statutes, asked amendment of the railway labor act and opposed "restrictive measures" such as train-length limits and excess-crew laws.

'Gay Widow' Quiz Reopened As Coroner Questions 'Suicide'

Widow

ing" and that any reference to suicide would be left to the filing of a supplementary death certificate.

Cremation of the body, which Gallagher said was ordered by the widow to be done "as quickly as possible and without publicity," after the body was found in the Burckhalter garage last Saturday, was delayed four or five hours while the vital organs were taken for analysis.

Dr. Squire said they showed about 39 per cent carbon monoxide in the blood and some alcohol; indications of "intemperance" because of an oversize liver; various other serious ailments and the presence of an hypnotic drug that induces sleep.

[Burckhalter's two sons, Donald, 20, whom Burckhalter adopted, and Bill, 17, were quoted by the United Press as saying they were "glad he's dead." The boys said Burckhalter's life was spent mostly in an alcoholic daze.

[Donald said he removed the hose-line from the car to "make it look accidental." He added that his father drank a quart of whisky a day and that "I've felt like killing him myself. He was no good."—Editor's note.]

Her Story Questioned

Mrs. Burckhalter was subjected to prolonged questioning and Gallagher expressed doubt as to some of the details she told of helping her husband rig up a vacuum cleaner hose to the exhaust of a car in their garage to make a lethal chamber of the interior, where he was found dead.

Psychiatric examination, a routine procedure, would be ordered for Mrs. Burckhalter, Gallagher said.

Gallagher said local police were in possession of a glass from which she told him she served Burckalter an eggnog just before he fumblingly pushed the starter of the car to start the flow of exhaust gas.

The prosecutor said she took the glass back to the kitchen and washed it before leaving on a shopping trip while Burckhalter lay in the car.

Gallagher questioned Kittel concerning his presence in the Burckhalters' suburban New York home four hours before police were summoned to find the body.

Friend Promises Aid

"I am going to help her all I can," Kittel told Gallagher.

Burckhalter was president of the Southern Chemical Co. in nearby Mount Vernon.

Mrs. Burckhalter's icy, wise-cracking calm—the lack of emotion that first aroused Prosecutor Gallagher's suspicions—broke late today when she was ordered to the county jail at Eastview, pending arraignment Tuesday.

Gallagher described Kittel as having been "very friendly" with Mrs. Burckhalter for some years, here and in California, and said that in recent weeks they had appeared together at wrestling matches, night clubs and theaters. She insisted, Gallagher said, that their relations were "platonic."

The widow did not attend the funeral, saying, "we never believed in funerals."

Paper Stolen; Reading Time, One Year in Jail

Theft of a Sunday newspaper brought Albert White, 27, of 649 N street northwest, a year in jail yesterday when he was arraigned before Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran.

White probably would have received a less severe sentence had he not told Judge Curran he had never been arrested before.

His record showed so many arrests that the court asked: "You've done practically nothing else but steal, have you? One year!"

Mormon Chief Finds 80 Best Age

Salt Lake City, Nov. 22 (AP).—Heber J. Grant, president of the Latter Day Saints Church, observed today the eighty-second anniversary of his birth with the conclusion that life begins not at 40 but 80.

The gray-bearded leader of the Mormons finds that "I can do more work now with greater ease than when I was 45."

Tall, thin and vigorous, the bespectacled churchman will be feted tonight by members of his family. Tomorrow, leaders of city and State will honor him on the twentieth anniversary of his appointment to the presidency of the church.

Experts Doubt Age Pensions Can Be Kept Self-Supporting

curity act.

By the time he reaches 65 years of age, he will have salary credits for himself and his wife totaling $30,000 each. This will mean that, on reaching 65, each will receive from the Social Security Board an annual old-age benefit of $450—or $900 for the two.

Annuities Are Cheap

But what will they pay for this annuity? (Payment, of course, is in the form of the pay roll tax.)

If the shopkeeper and his wife enter the system on January 1, 1939, each will pay $1.140 in taxes by the time they reach retirement age.

If he entered the system at the beginning January 1, 1937, he could buy the $450 annuity for $360 in total tax payments. This is due to the fact that the payroll tax is stepped up 1 per cent each for three years for both employer and employe, culminating in an aggregate of 6 per cent on January 1, 1940.

If the shopkeeper entered the system after the tax rate had risen to the maximum, he could still buy his $450 annuity for $1,800 in total tax payments.

Insurance Rates Higher

In order to understand the advantage to the shopkeeper, it is necessary to get some idea as to what he would have o pay an insurance company.

Officials of a large insurance company revealed yesterday that, in order to get an annuity of $10 per month—$120 per year—it would be necessary to pay to the company $118.63 over a period of 10 years—a total of $1,186.30.

In other words, the shopkeeper, if he entered the old age benedit system next January 1, could buy $37.50 pr month through payroll tax payments for less than he would have to pay an insurance company for $10 per month.

But this is not all. The insurance company rate quoted includes no death benefit whatever. The social security old age plan provides for death benefits.

Beneficiary Gambles

Under the insurance company annuity plan, if the man died before completion of his ten annual payments, his estate simply would receive over a period of 10 years what he has paid in. If he died within one month after his $10 per month annuity starts, that is all he would receive. I nother words, he gambles on receiving only $10 for payments totaling $1,186.30.

The old age plan would pay his estate 3½ per cent of his salary credits if he died before retirement age. Then, if he died within one month after his annuity started, his estate still would receive the difference between what had been paid him and 3½ per cent of his salary credits.

In the shopkeeper illustration, tax payments are the combined payments for both employer and employe. From the standpoint of an employe, tax payments would be only half those cited in the illustration.

In other words, a man who was 55 when the old age plan went into effect on January 1, 1937, will be able to buy at 65 an annuity of $450—provided his salary was $3,000 a year—with tax payments totaling only $460.

It is the person who will take advantage of the plan, however, which has caused concern.

With this factor present, experts believe it is highly questionable—in fact, virtually impossible—to keep the plan on a self-supporting basis with present taxes.

Some officials see no way out except to abandon entirely the idea of keeping the plan self-supporting and to adopt an arrangement whereby the plan would be supported partly by pay roll taxes and partly by general revenues.

Social security Board officials denied knowledge of any attempt by favored persons to take advantage of the old age plan. It is regarded in reliable quarters, however, that circulars have been sent through the mails informing favored groups of their opportunities under the act.

Persons familiar with the way the system operates fear that there will be widespread pay roll padding in order to build up credits for annuities.

CCC Boy Is Held For Plot on Train

James S. Thomas, 20, colored CCC worker, was held to the grand jury under $5,000 bail in Police Court yesterday charged with placing a 75-pound boulder on the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks.

Detective E. E. Scott presented to Judge Edward M. Curran a signed statement from the youth admitting that he placed the rock last Thursday "after the thought came to my mind." Scott stated the boy told him he wanted to see a train wreck.

A juvenile in the case was not arraigned. He is being held at the Receiving Home pending arraignment in Juvenile Court.

Prosecutions Will Begin Soon, Says Wage Law Administrator

By the Associated Press.

Administrator Elmer F. Andrews said yesterday the wage-hour administration soon would start prosecuting violators of the fair labor standards act.

Announcing at a press conference that he had received about 1,200 complaints alleging violations, Andrews said:

"We think it is time to consider very seriously taking some cases to the courts and starting prosecutions. . . . "We will pick out first the ceses where employers say they'll be darned if they'll comply with the act."

The Justice Department, Andrews said, will direct the prosecutions. He asserted that only about 25 per cent of the complaints he has received "look like real complaints under the act—the rest either do not include enough information or pertai nto intrastate commerce."

Nazis Prepare To Intervene in Ruthenia Crisis

Hitler Opposes Hungary Terrorism Claimed Heavy Firing Reported

By the United Press.

Berlin, Nov. 22.—Germany prepared to intervene in Czechoslovakia's eastern province of Ruthenia where Polish-Hungarian demands for a common frontier threatened an invasion by Polish-Hungarian troops.

It was understood Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop would go to Rome to discuss the acute Ruthenian situation with Italain Foreign Minister Ciano.

Ribbentrop will start for Rome after conferring at Berchtesgaden Wednesday with Reichsfuehrer Hitler, who has warned that any attempts to amputate Ruthenia for satisfaction of the Polish-Hungarian revisionist program might upset European peace.

Hitler opposes the idea of a common frontier between Hungary and Poland because it would jeopardize his economic and political ambitions in central and southeastern Europe. Italy, on the other hand, has been agreeable to the demands of Warsaw and Budapest.

Rejected at Parley

At the Italo-German arbitration conference in Vienna on November 2, when large areas of Czech territory were surrendered to Hungary, the common frontier demand was rejected although the southwestern corner of Ruthenia and most of the province's population centers went to Hungary.

It was said Ribbentrop would talk with Ciano before the latter goes to Warsaw to discuss with Polish leaders the question of the Ruthenian boundaries on the north and south.

The situation grew increasingly acute today as a "war of words" between Germany and Hungary filled the air waves and further armed clashes were reported from southern Ruthenia.

The Hungarians and Poles described the clashes as a "revolt" by Ruthenians demanding annexation to Hungary. The Czechs attributed the troubles to Hungarian and Polish "terrorists" who allegedly invaded the borders.

Terrorism Claimed

Hungary, meanwhile, ordered the expulsion of Czech-Slovaks from the territory which she occupied under the terms of Italo-German arbitration at Vienna and the government of Czecho-Slovakia's autonomous Slovakia province retaliated by ordering confiscation of Hungarian property within its borders.

While accurate reports from the scene of the "disturbances" in Ruthenia were difficult to obtain, Budapest newspapers published alarming details of alleged terrorism there.

Dispatches claimed that terrorists were blowing up bridges and obstructing roads and that the sound of artillery fire could be heard nightly from the neighborhood of Chust, new capital of the autonomous Ruthenian government.

Hacha Accepts Nominations

Prague, Nov. 22 (AP).—Dr. Emil Hacha, president of the Supreme Court administration, accepted the nomination of leading Czecho-Slovak political parties today to be a candidate in presidential elections November 28.

Political circles deemed it in the nation's best interests to have Foreign Minister Frantisek Chvalkovsky remain at that post, and his candidacy, which had seemed certain, was dropped.

The Senate, meanwhile, accepted a law conferring autonomy upon Slovakia and Carpatho-Ukraine (Ruthenia). The lower house approved the autonomy measure last week.

'Jim Crow' Issue In Welfare Group

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 22 (AP).—A controversy over segregation of colored and white delegates enlivened sessions of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare today after the group's race relations section adopted a resolution demanding suspension of "Jim Crow" laws.

Judge Louise O. Charlton, chairman, said the protest would not be considered by the conference.

A proposal that the address of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt tonight be held at a church was dropped when authorities announced segregation ordinances applied in churches as well as in other public buildings.

West Indies Mountain Topples; 100 Feared Dead Under Debris

Mud Deluges Towns Second Slide Hits Kills Coffinmakers

By the Associated Press

Castries, St. Lucia, British West Indies, Nov. 22.—Steep mountainsides of St. Lucia, among the most beautiful in the West Indies, cracked open today in a series of avalanches, burying an undetermined number of persons estimated as running into the hundreds.

The island government, supervising rescue work, late today had accounted for 75 bodies. Many persons were missing and one estimate was that 150 had been killed.

An area of 64 square miles was ordered evacuated as a precautionary measure as slides continued this afternoon.

Seven acres were covered with clay slime 20 feet deep.

A whole mountain appeared to have split and toppled over, the mass moving across a valley so rapidly that few had time to escape its path. Legs and arms were severed from bodies by the rush of debris.

Some witnesses said the landslides began with loud detonations, lending weight to reports they might be of volcanic origin. The meteorological station of nearby Martinique Island Saturday warned that disturbances could be expected Monday or Tuesday.

Others attributed the slides solely to continuous rains of the last three weeks. Whatever the cause, the rain added to the tragedy, loosening acres of land which tumbled down with horrifying roar.

Two hamlets were buried in the first slide last night. New avalanches today buried more inhabitants, including injured victims of the first and rescue workers and carpenters building wooden coffins.

Fifty laborers were swept into a river when a house in which they were sheltered tumbled down with an acre of land. Few were saved.

Sixty injured were being treated at the Port Castries Hospital.

Temporary roadside morgues were established in the rain, which hampered workers. Long lines of anxious persons, many weeping, waited for news of missing relatives.

Chamberlain and Halifax Going To Paris for Defense Talks

French

decrees wrecking the 40-hour week. On strike already were 9,000 metal workers, with 17,000 more ready to start a "stay-in" strike tomorrow.

Comprehensive Talks

The Anglo-French conversations were designed to elucidate how the two nations could cope with expanding German influence and at the same time preserve the September 29 peace of Munich which Prime Minister Chamberlain called "peace with honor."

The range of this subject will not exclude such vital problems as the Spanish war, the question of a four-power pact of Britain, France, Italy and Germany, a French-British air pact, French relations with the Soviet Union, and how to combat any efforts of the Rome-Berlin axis to drive a wedge between the two democracies.

Premier Daladier, fighting off a Socialist-Communist attack on his new financial and economic decrees before the Chamber of Deputies finance committee, said he was ready to ask Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax to postpone their visit unless he received a favorable vote.

The committee then defeated a Socialist motion calling for nullification of the financial program.

Daladier had asked the committee to confine its deliberations to the 1939 budget and to refrain from discussing the economic decrees.

The premier also said that if he were forced to request postponement of the French-British conversations he would call Parliament immediately to pass on his financial rehabilitation plan.

Improvement in Air

Special Dispatch to The Post.

London, Nov. 22.—Improved coordination between the British and French air forces and armies is expected to be the most tangible result of the three-day good-will visit to Paris which Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax begin tomorrow.

The original purpose of the Paris talks with Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Bonnet has been shot out from under the visit by the Jewish pogroms in Germany. That purpose was "appeasement" Chamberlain was willing to consider the return of colonies to the Reich.

The obviously important thing on the Paris agenda is defense. The French may lead off by asking what the British mean by recently shifting the emphasis from bombers to fighters in the strength of the Royal Air Force, when French and other strategists say all along that the only effective war is an offensive war.

The British have a perfect right to demand what is going to be done to improve the French air force. It is lamentably weak in modern planes, though superb in personnel.

Figures Vary

The first-line strength of France is variously figured at 1,600 to 2,000 planes. But the figures mean nothing unless one knows exactly how old the planes are, what types they are and how they compare in speed and other details with Germany's new fast ships.

What the French really need are about 2,000 planes from the United States. The 100 ordered are only a drop in the bucket and are not coming before February.

The French, while embarrassed about the present state of their war planes, are proud of their army. They intend to ask the British a few questions about their own army. One question will be along these lines: "Are you going to send us a competent land force in the next war? Must we take as final certain statements by your cabinet ministers to the effect that Britain will never again raise an expeditionary force comparable with a continental army?"

This army question is a serious one and has to be examined in post-Munich terms. Instead of being immobilized by Czech-Slovak on the eastern front to an important extent, Germany can now dispatch 35 additional divisions westward to attack France, and together with Italy, can put in the field about 100 divisions to confront the Western powers.

If France faces the music alone, she fields about 40 divisions, the ratio against her being 2½ to 1. It is a worse ratio in population, 80,000,000 Germans and 40,000,000 Italians against 40,000,000 French, or 3 to 1.

The British have already assured the French there will be immediate conscription at the outbreak of war but France wants to know what this means in terms of numbers of troops immediately crossing the channel, or in three months time, or six months after the outbreak.

What would please the French would be to have 13 of the 18 British territorial army divisions available on the continent (the remaining five are earmarked for anti-aircraft defense at home") These 13 would be comforting in addition to the regular British mechanized and motorized divisions which would go to France at the drop of a hat.

Hull Expected To Reject Reply Of Japanese

Note

officials here incline to believe she means that there should be equality among all foreign nations but that Japan in China is not a foreign nation.

May Assert Equal Lights

Informed students of governmental affairs expect the next American note to assert that the rights of the United States are on a par with those of Japan or any other nation.

Within the State department there are two schools of thought as to the best means of tackling the diplomatic argument. One school contends the United States should continue to uphold the nine-power treaty in which the signatory powers gave pledges to respect China's territorial integrity and independence, as well as to maintain the open door.

Others say that because the United States should devote herself first to her own interests, she should press solely for recognition of her equal rights.

They say that if our interests are protected we can let the political considerations drop, and that China's independence and integrity have already disappeared.

The first group of officials reply that Manchukuo has proved what will happen to American interests once the integrity and independence of China vanish. In Manchukuo, as Secretary Hull set forth in his note of October 6, Japan promised to protect American rights, but the facts are that American interests have been virtually squeezed out.

Strikers Barred From Picketing Workers' Homes

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 22 (AP).—New York's Court of Appeals, ruling in a case growing out of a 2-year-old strike at a Remington-Rand Corporation plant, upheld today a lower court injunction to prohibit picketing of homes of individual workers in labor disputes.

Remington-Rand counsel argued that "this so-called picketing of homes is not legal, but is in effect an illegal secondary boycott which has been condemned by the courts."

National Farm Income Set at $6,198,000,000

The Agriculture Department estimated yesterday the national cash farm income for the first ten months of 1938 at $6,198,000,020. The income for the corresponding period last year was $7,083,000,000 or about 12 per cent more.

Included in the estimate were Government benefit payments totaling $375,000,000, or 11 per cent more than the $358,000,000 in Federal aid paid out during the first ten months of 1737.

Russian Cultists Who Fled Czar in 1904 Fear Lower California Haven May Be Taken

By the United Press.

Ensenada, Lower California, Mexico, Nov. 22.—After 34 years in the Guadalupe Valley, one of the few semifertile spots of the long peninsula of southern California, the Malakan Russians, a group of religious refugees, were looking around today for a new homeland that is not so arid and barren.

The Malakans, fleeing from the persecution of the Russian czars, settled in the valley, 80 miles south of the United States border, in 1904.

There were 30 families, numbering several hundred persons, who formed the original colony on a 1,500-acre tract leased from the Mexican government for $72,000 for 99 years.

For a time the colony prospered, and in 1919 there were 45 families, numbering about 400 persons, engaged in farming in the narrow valley.

That year marked the peak of the colonization project. Since then it has dwindled so that today there are less than 300 persons on the leasehold.

Of late a new threat has arisen, in the policy of the present Mexican administration to break up large land holdings.

Most of the Malakans who remain on the leasehold fear the government will inevitably scatter the colony.

It is probable that the colony would have made a general exodus to more fertile southern California long ago were it not for United States immigration laws and quota restrictions.

These people had selected one of the most favorable spots in the 58,328 square miles of arid peninsula toward which Jewish leaders now are looking for a haven for oppressed European minorities.

They were accustomed to hard living for their original home was on the frozen steppes of central Russia. Later they moved to the arid Province of Kars, in Caucasia, and from there, with Michael Agalsoff as their leader, came to Guadalupe Valley after looking over the entire world for a place to practice their religious beliefs unmolested.

Byrd Is Hopeful Virginia Will Get Farm Laboratory

Winchester, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—Senator Harry F. Byrd, returning from Washington, where he conferred with Department of Agriculture officials regarding establishment in Virginia of one of the new farm laboratories authorized in the recent session of Congress, said today he was "hopeful that Virginia will be selected."

Virginia's junior Senator added: "Certainly no other State offers the superior advantages and opportunities for this work."

Swiss Draft Law To Expand Army

Berne, Switzerland, Nov. 22 (AP).—The Swiss Federal Council drew up a proposed law today making every able-bodied Swiss male between 18 and 60 years eligible for military service.

Present ages for military service are between 20 and 48. It was estimated unofficially the law would increase the number of men Switzerland could mobilize from 280,000 to nearly 400,000.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

Just a common cough, a chest cold, or a bronchial irritation of today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. They may be relieved now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medicinal combination designed to aid nature in soothing and healing infected mucous membranes by allaying irritation and inflammation and by aiding in loosening and expelling germ-laden phlegm.

The Medical Profession has for generations recognized the beneficial effect of Beechwood Creosote in the treatment of coughs, chest colds, and bronchial irritations. A special process was worked out by a chemist, for blending Creosote with other ingredients so that now in Creomulsion you get a good dose of genuine Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and may be taken frequently by both adults and children.

Creomulsion is one preparation that goes to the very seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm. When coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles due to common colds hang on, get a bottle of Creomulsion from your druggist, use it as directed and if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained, the druggist is authorized to refund your money. Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Dies Blames Anti-Semitism On New Deal

Cites Class Doctrines Sees Red Infiltration Hits Hopkins, Perkins

By Sidney Olson.

Chairman Martin Dies, of the House committee investigating un-American activities, charged last night that prominent New Dealers, "through the promotion of class hatred," were responsible for a menacing Nation-wide wave of anti-Semitism and anti-Catholicism.

Dies asserted racial and religious hatred followed on the heels of class hatred. He said such New Dealers as Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator; Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, and Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, had been "disseminating doctrines of class hatred . . . setting up one class against another, the employer versus the worker."

Propaganda the Crux

"None of these, he said, could "very well criticize those who now sponsor race and religious hatred."

He said that getting to the bottom of anti-Jewish propaganda was the committee's "most difficult task."

Dies said the "real danger" comes "from the example set in high places." He continued:

"Hopkins and Ickes and Perkins have surrounded themselves with men, sincere in their beliefs, I suppose, but who are nevertheless vigorously pursuing the chief strategies and party lines of communism.

"Now communism, especially in this country, has been somehow closely linked up in the public mind with the Jewish people. The names of Marx and Engels, and of many of those now prominent in communism, are responsible for this.

Anti-Jewish Racket

"The anti-Jewish organizations constitute one of the biggest hidden rackets in the country. There are about 300 organizations now, either anti-Semitic or anti-Catholic. They are pure rackets, collecting thousands of dollars in dues, for which they do not have to account, and spreading tons of literature everywhere."

He said:

"The National Labor Relations Board has been an agency for the dissemination of great class hatred in this country. The Mexico City speech of John L. Lewis, chairman of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, in which he labeled all employers as 'Fascists,' was another step in that direction."

Dies further charged that the WPA, especially through its writers' project, aimed to set class against class, and named a publication, "Indians at Work," published by the Bureau of Indian Affairs of the Interior Department, as typical of the "subtlety" characterizing efforts in that direction.

He declared that the election returns "signified the revolt of the middle class, particularly in the Midwest," against such doctrines.

Hits Jackson, Ickes

After citing the anti-monopoly speeches of last Christmas by Ickes and Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson, as inciting to class hatred, Dies said that the State and Commerce departments seemed to be the only Government departments entirely free of such personnel and propaganda. He added that the Agriculture Department was in his opinion "almost free."

In testimony yesterday Sam Baron, a former Spainsh War correspondent, told the committee that Communists had kidnaped and murdered many Americans and other volunteers in the Spanish loyalist side, "because they thought they were untrustworthy."

Baron, who said he was a former alternate member of the executive committee of the Socialist Party of America, said he had resigned from the party to testify as an individual.

He said that he was an ardent supporter of the loyalist government "in its war against international fascism," and claimed he covered 5,000 miles of loyalist Spain while reporting for the Socialist Call, official American Socialist newspaper.

Earlier, Alice Lee Jemison, a Seneca Indian, representing the American Indian Federation, testified that several officials of the Indian Bureau were members of the American Civil Liberties Union, described by several witnesses as a Communist Front organization.

Nazi Guards Tell World to Choose Haven For Jews or Expect Their Annihilation world discussion. The Jews have brought that on through their own hysteria."—Editor's note.]

In line with the recent attack of the Nazi press on the United States, "Schwarz Korps" carried also on its front page a cartoon featured by a characterization of Uncle Sam with the Jewish symbol, the Star of David, emblazoned on his vest.

Lynching Pictured

The facial features are those of a Jew as customarily pictured in the Nazi press. The caption to the cartoon depicts Uncle Sam as saying, "and so we protest in the name of humanity against the barbaric methods in Germany."

In the background of the cartoon are pictured a horror-stricken individual in the electric chair, a colored man who has been lynched and typical American skyscrapers.

Likening "the threat" of the democracies to a pasteboard sword, the Nazis disclosed in print for the first time their real views of the "peace of Munich." The implication is that the ruthlessness of the present anti-Jewish policy in the Reich is a consequence of the apparent weakness displayed by Britain and France during the September crisis.

In a threatening tone, the Schwarz Korps admonishes democracies "to occupy themselves with the problem of creating a Jewish state somewhere else" and "not to try to delay this logical and unavoidable solution through monotonous, howling threats and blackmail."

The paper suggests that the United States and the British Empire together are big enough to accommodate "all the 20,000,000 Jews in the world," asserting that some circles in the Reich were ready for a final solution of hte Jewish issue "by the most brutal means" in 1933.

Doubt Democracies Strength

The paper adds: "In principle this view was correct but at that time it had to remain a theory because we did not have the military power we possess today. In 1933 the Jews might have succeeded in provoking other nations to start a war of revenge against us. Today the worst of the democratic powers will think twice before they try that.

"We shall now complete the solution of the Jewish problem because it is necessary, because we do not any longer take notice of the world's shouting and, finally, because no one in the wold can prevent us from doing so.

"The problem is clear. It means the complete elimination and absolute segregation of the Jews. It is not merely the elimination of the Jews from German economic life, but much more than this. It cannot be expected of any German that he should live under the same roof with Jews recognized as race murderers and criminal enemies of the German people.

"The Jews must, therefore, be hunted out of our houses and residential districts and housed in streets and blocks they will keep to themselves.

"They must be branded and the right must be taken from them of disposing in ermany their real property or mortgages."

The remarks of Schwarz Korps concerning extermination with fire and sword result from the reasoning that if the Jew were permitted to remain in the Reich, he would become destitute, and that finally all the Jews in the country would become criminals.

"In line with their intrinsic nature, they would all sink to criminality . . . were we to permit this, it would result in a conspiracy of the underworld such as may perhaps be possible in the United States but certainly not in ermany.

"In the fact of such a development, we should be confronted with the hard necessity of exterminating this Jewish underworld exactly as we in our orderly state exterminate criminals—with fire and sword. This would be the end of Jewry, indeed, it annihilation."

bassy in Berlin on Monday had sent a note to the foreign office, asking formal assurance that Americans in Germany would not be subject to the November 12 decree against Jewish participation in business or some professions, including the practice of medicine.

These developments came while the American delegation, including Secretary Hull, was completing preparations to depart for the eighth International Conference of American States at Lima, Peru. There, beginning December 9, efforts will be concentrated on further prefecting unity of all the American nations against foreign campaigns of Nazi and Fascist penetration.

Ambassador Dieckhoff, displaying his customary cheery smile when he appeared at the State Department building yesterday, said he had only come to say good-by, and had no message from his government to present. He said he did not know how long he would remain in Germany; likewise uncertain is the length of time that Ambassador Wilson will be kept in this country, although it is generally expected the two envoys will remain in their respective homelands through the Christmas holidays, at least.

Officials here displayed interest in reports that Germany also may call home her ambassador to London, but none would comment on this rumored development.

Wife's Kidnaping Charge Against Tillema Ignored

Taunton, Mass., Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Refusal to indict John Albert Tillema, political science professor at George Washington University, on a charge of kidnaping his own children was made yesterday by the Bristol County grand jury.

Mrs. Catherine Tillema, the professor's divorced wife and daughter of the late David J. Hill, once United States Ambassador to Germany, preferred the charge.

She alleged that after Tillema received permission to take their son, John, jr., 13, on a trip September 14, he took not only the boy but also their daughter, Juliette, 11, and failed to return them. A resident of Brookline, Mrs. Tillema was vacationing at Fairhaven at the time.

Challenge To The Police

Washington is not disposed to be unduly impatient over the failure of the police yet to apprehend the criminal who has made several deadly assaults upon citizens in the upper Rock Creek Park area during the last two weeks. The police are undoubtedly making a strenuous effort to track down this so-called sniper. But it is to be remembered that success in this effort is demanded.

A report by the Criminal Justice Association a few months ago noted a substantial improvement in law enforcement in the District. The police make more arrests in proportion to the number of crimes committed. Justice in the courts has been expedited. Director Nolen was able to report that Washington was no longer the safest big city in the United States in which to commit a crime.

Two events have now blurred that encouraging picture. In addition to the mysterious sniper there is the implication of police venality resulting from the Warring trial. Lack of public confidence arising from both these sources must be removed if the excellent progress recently begun is to continue.

Three years ago the Police Department was extensively investigated by a congressional committee. That probe did not result in extensive changes, but it did help to give the public a new awareness of the law-enforcement problem. There is no occasion for another such inquiry. The Criminal Justice Association is keeping the public fully informed as to the weaknesses of the law-enforcement system and as to progress made in correcting them.

The responsible officials will remember, however, that the public is watching their activity with close attention. Assurance is needed that the Police Department can act quickly and effectively when an emergency arises. The public wants to be assured, moreover, that today no shred of applicability pertains to reports of past corruption within the department.

Regardless of the outcome of current investigations, however, more policemen are needed. Fortunately the local budget makes provision for 50 additional privates, and two new police stations. That is a modest estimate of the department's urgent needs. Those who are now demanding a show of efficiency on the part of the police must be just as vigorous in their efforts to furnish this department with means requisite to efficiency.

Third-Party Clash

Mayor LaGuardia of New York has been able to arouse no enthusiasm for a progressive third-party movement. Only the La Follettes seem to be actively interested in the idea. And they have their own Progressive Party to rebuild as a result of its disheartening reverses in last week's elections. There is no indication that they wish to pass the ball to Mayor LaGuardia.

Gov. Murphy's recent rejection of the third-party idea came after a long conference with President Roosevelt. While he spoke only for himself, he doubtless also reflected the views of the President when he declared that progressivism "must be carried forward through the Democratic Party." It is difficult to see how any one as closely associated with the New Deal as Gov. Murphy has been could reach any other conclusion at this time.

A third party made up of supporters of the New Deal for active participation in the 1940 presidential contest would fulfill the most ardent hopes of the Republican Party. For it would inevitably draw a line of cleavage between the more conservative Democrats and the left-wing groups that cling to the party of Jefferson only for the purpose of supporting President Roosevelt. Both of these groups would be under severe handicaps if they should nominate different candidates for 1940 and go their separate ways.

Moreover, the President's obvious desire to see a New Deal candidate nominated by the Democratic Party would suffer a setback if a number of his lieutenants should transfer their allegiance to a new political organization. Gov. Murphy, Senator Bulkley and other New Dealers who went down before the G. O. P. onslaught of November 8 have no desire to contribute to further disintegration of the forces supporting the President.

It is not unnatural that Mayor LaGuardia should take a different view. Before assuming leadership of the American Labor Party in New York he was a Republican. But he has long since burned the bridges between himself and the G. O. P. Further ascent up the political ladder for Mr. LaGuardia depends upon the organization of so-called progressive groups from both major parties into a unified political movement. In that respect the New York mayor's interests come into a direct clash with those of the President.

Profit Sharing

In theory there is much to be said for plans enabling employes of a company to participate in its profits. In practice, such systems have to be carefully safeguarded against abuse and, in many instances, it is wiser not to undertake experiments of this sort.

The advantages are fairly obvious. In addition to increasing his income, an employe who shares in the profits of enterprise is given an added incentive to do good work. He is less inclined to strike or change his job. The disadvantages are equally plain. Workers who share in fluctuating profits are disappointed when bad years cut down or eliminate the extra returns. Indeed, they may have become so accustomed to relying upon a definite share in profits that any reduction would entail serious financial embarrassment.

It is significant that the heads of three large corporations testifying before a Senate committee stressed the improvement in employer-employe relationships resulting from profit sharing. Two of the witnesses also emphasized the importance of fixing wage rates without regard to the profit dividends paid to workers. That, of course, is an acknowledgment that an unscrupulous employer might cut down regular wage payments, leaving workers to rely upon uncertain promises of extra compensation.

Not only conscientious management but also a strong thriving business is required to make a success of profit sharing. Indeed, it is far from easy to determine where to draw the line between real profit sharing and various plans which encourage employes to invest in company stock. In some cases, employe stock-purchase plans have resulted in serious losses to workers when years of depression have converted a seemingly good investment into a bad one.

To encourage direct profit sharing by compensatory tax allowances would, as witnesses before the Senate committee warned, tempt some employers to lower wages as an offset. It would be more to the point to consider legislation removing some of the obstacles to profit-making so that industry could employ more men at stable wages.

In an issue of the Labor Review, published by the United States Department of Labor, it was stated some months ago that profit sharing "although failing to meet with general success, has been the subject of periodic interest, particularly during periods of rising business activity." Evidence collected by the National Industrial Conference Board shows that a high percentage of genuine profit-sharing plans have been discontinued.

The highly fluctuating earnings of industrial corporations no doubt explain why profit sharing is unlikely to survive industrial depressions except in case of a few exceptionally favored concerns. Until a means of stabilizing industrial activity and earnings is discovered, profit sharing can provide only a limited addition to earnings of certain groups of employes. What the great majority of workers seek and are not yet able to obtain is steady employment at good rates of pay.

Last-Minute Givers

The last report luncheon of the 1938 Community Chest drive is scheduled for noon today. And it is apparent that the teams will be considerably short of their aggregate goal as the campaign formally closes. This should not mean, however, that part of the humanitarian work financed by the Chest will be forsaken during the coming year.

The Chest intends to finish its job in spite of the formal ending of the campaign. That is not only a wise but an essential conclusion. Workers who have carried on this systematic solicitation realize that for every dollar of the $2,127,000 quota which they fail to obtain some child will be deprived of opportunity or some adult of urgent relief. In an activity so intimately touching the lives of Washington's unfortunates the community cannot afford to fail by even a small percentage.

Most of those who are eager to contribute have probably already done so. The great majority are willing givers. Indeed, they consider it their privilege to participate in this democratic cause. But the eager givers have not quite filled the Chest. That throws a definite responsibility upon those who have not come forward with any contributions, large or small. For at least another week they will have opportunity to do their part in this essential civic undertaking.

A few may have withheld their gifts because of dissatisfaction with some phase of the campaign or with some particular aspect of Community Chest policy. But these are petty objections, meaning nothing when compared to the broad objectives sought. As the Chest makes its final appeal to last-minute givers no minor criticisms should be allowed to detract from its success.

Ruthenian Tangle

Of all the regions impermanently welded together to form Czecho-Slovakia, Ruthenia was economically the poorest and least desirable. It was incorporated in the Czech-Slovak state almost as an afterthought, for the majority of its inhabitants were neither Czechs nor Slovaks. They were and are of Ukrainian language and culture.

Ruthenia, or what is left of it following the recent dismemberment, is today the center of an important international struggle. The nations involved are Hungary, Poland, Germany, Italy and Czecho-Slovakia. And the major interest is not economic but strategic. Poland and Hungary view Ruthenia as a barrier that should be destroyed so as to create a joint frontier between them. Germany both as the patron of the new Czech-Slovak state and for reasons of its own, opposes the total disappearance of Ruthenia. In present form it is a useful springboard to the East.

The struggle began immediately after the Munich settlement. In the scramble for Czech-Slovak territories Poland demanded and received the Teschen area. Hungary's claims for Slovak regions containing a Magyar population were also met. But neither country is wholly satisfied with what it has received. They would prefer a liquidation of Ruthenia. By establishing a common frontier they hoped to create a new barrier to Germany's Drang nach Osten. It was reported that Italy favored this Polish and Hungarian plan.

Forced by the demands of Budapest and Warsaw, the Prague government referred both the Slovak and Ruthenian problems to the partners of the Berlin-Rome axis. The move was shrewd. The opposing views of Germany and Italy, it was felt, might save for Czecho-Slovakia at least a portion of the province. This calculation proved correct. A considerable portion of Ruthenia, together with 220,000 of its 725,000 inhabitants was ceded to Hungary. But a segment was permitted to remain autonomous under Czech-Slovak rule.

Like many other phases of the settlement concerning Czecho-Slovakia, the Ruthenian partition did violence to the principle of self-determination. But, as prospective territorial beneficiaries, neither Poland nor Hungary, nor Germany for that matter, are manifesting any great interest in that principle today.

The disappearance of one set of minorities has created a new set. And the same strategic and economic arguments used in the creation of Czecho-Slovakia according to its former frontiers are being used now to include Czech and Slovak and Ruthenian populations within the confines of the new successor states. Indeed the clash of conflicting aims and ambitions is now the chief guarantee for preservation of Ruthenia's newly gained autonomy.

Racial and linguistic lines in Central Europe are and always have been a hopeless hodgepodge. It is impossible to draw satisfactory boundary lines on a basis of real self-determination. The Versailles Treaty proved that. The post-Munich developments with respect to Czecho-Slovakia are only proving it again.

The Endless Tale

The tale of man's inhumanity to man is long, and encircles the globe.

At the moment, American eyes are focused on Central Europe, where thousands of individuals whose sole crime is their race or their religion have been made victims of persecutions which have shocked and outraged decent people everywhere.

But Nazi Germany does not' overshadow the Spanish picture, where for 28 months a great nation has been on the rack of civil war. And beyond Spain and Germany is Russia, with its mass executions and other evidences of social sickness which no censorship can completely hide.

For sheer magnitude of horror, however, nothing is comparable to the plight of the tens of millions of Chinese who have found themselves in the path of the invaders. The incredible brutalities perpetrated by the Japanese in Nanking are not an isolated instance. So heavy has been the hand of the conqueror that the Chinese, rather than surrender, have fled into the interior in huge numbers, burning their towns behind them to leave the victors controlling only what is graphically described as "scorched earth."

The other day report reached Changsha, capital of Hunan Province, that the Japanese were at the gates. The report proved false. But those responsible for the protection of the city laid three-fourths of it in ashes before they discovered their mistake. So tens of thousands more Chinese are homeless. Yet the victims of the Changsha fire add only another stream to the great flood of misery that engulfs China today.

Palestine And Refugees

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What can be done to break open the apparent conspiracy of silence on the part of British, and even on the part of American Governmental leaders, in their completely ignoring Palestine as the self-evident, already existing and legally established Jewish national home? Why has not Palestine been considered in preference to the half dozen imaginary panaceas for the colonization of refugee Jews in the backwoods of civilization, on the basis of expensive schemes, estimated to cost hundreds of millions of dollars, which probably will suffer the fate of the late Evian conference?

Why does not an American Jewish or non-Jewish leader publicly challenge Great Britain immediately to enforce the League of Nations mandate for Palestine and facilitate large mass colonization of refugee Jews in Palestine with as much political and military force, public authority and economic assistance as would have to be applied in connection with any colonization scheme now proposed? Certainly, Palestine and neighboring Arab lands are not more densely populated than any other part of the world to which refugee Jews could now gain ready access.

Johnson In Politics

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The success of Walter Johnson in his race for county commissioner for Montgomery County, Md., shows the esteem and respect in which he is held by his fellow citizens of that county.

The writer heard Walter on the air when he was accorded the distinguished honor of being presented to the radio audience by Mr. John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee. While he has not the radio technique of Graham McNamee nor the golden voice of the typical demagogue, he evidenced solid common sense in every utterance, the kind of sense so sorely needed in public life today.

Walter Johnson can carry his district for Congress two years hence and I urge his friends in every county to begin now to promote his candidacy for that honor.

Question Of Pan-American Defense

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The assembling of delegates in conference from the 21 American republics at Lima, Peru, December 9, for consideration of questions affecting the welfare and security of their respective countries individually and collectively makes timely some discussion of the applicability of the Monroe Doctrine under existing world conditions.

There were doubtless two reasons that prompted promulgation of this doctrine. The South American countries had just thrown off the galling yoke of Spain, and were endeavoring to establish among themselves democratic republics, taking our form of Government as their model. At that time these countries were small in population and in resources, and were utterly incapable of resisting aggression of European powers. It was therefore the purpose of the Monroe Doctrine to enable these countries to work out their destinies and develop their respective forms of government without threat or fear of molestation or intervention from any European country.

The other reason for the doctrine was one of self-interest on the part of the American Government, as it was realized that should European governments, which were then all monarchical and utterly inimical to democracy, be permitted to extend their systems to the South American countries, and acquire a dominating influence in their governments, and base therein for military operations our own security and welfare would be seriously threatened and perhaps jeopardized.

That was a long time ago, and the world has moved forward apace since then. Most, if not all, of the South American countries have now established more or less stable governments, and have grown greatly in population, wealth and military strength. In other words, they have passed the infant stage, and have now reached the dignity and responsibility of full maturity. This would seem to make the Monroe Doctrine obsolete and unnecessary, and its continued assertion on our part as a reflection upon our Southern neighbors, which they quite naturally resent.

Under existing conditions, and with the growth and development of the South American countries the protection of this hemisphere from foreign aggressions has now become the concern and duty of all of the republics and devolves upon them equally. The responsibility for the protection and the preservation of our respective institutions, social, and political ideals is no longer the duty of the United States alone.

This fact should be recognized by the United States.

If these ideas are sound, and it would seem self-evident that they are, the present condition of world affairs would appear to make the time ripe and the need imperative for all the republics to get together, and on the basis of sovereign equality work out some plan for their mutual protection and material welfare.

It would seem that the Lima Conference offers an unprecedented opportunity for such a consummation, so necessary and devoutly to be wished, and that protection from foreign aggressions and the promotion of the general welfare of all of the Americas can best be promoted by joint and several treaties between all the American republics for an offensive and defensive alliance.

It is fully appreciated that there are many difficulties in the way of accomplishing such alliances and that even though all the republics should respond favorably to the suggestion the treaties would have to be drafted with the utmost painstaking care.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is interesting to note that Foreign Minister Oswald Aranha of Argentina refuses to unite in a Pan-American defense program. It is natural to presume that he fears his country will lose prestige in such a combination.

The same objective can be approximated by parallel rather than by concerted action. It will be necessary for each country to consult the other American republics on the part each will play in order that there will exist ample quantities and quality of all means of defense.

Should an emergency arise after the Western Hemisphere is properly armed, the crises would force coordination of defense plans, just as a central command evolved out of the rivalries and jealousies of the Allied Staff Officers in the World War. HOWARD D. WOODSON.

Retort To 'Heine'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The "Heine," whose letter appears in The Post of Saturday, affords an excellent "close-up" of the sort of undesirable aliens who should be sent home to Hitler. While speaking of our brains rattling in a mustard seed, he shows neither the brains of a crock nor the conscience of a man, practically acknowledging that for every criticism we make of Hitler's "jude-putsch" another Jew will be persecuted (possibly murdered). And as for us being Dummkopfen, the average Deutsche Dummkopf would take first prize at a Dumm-Schau.

Even in signing it he shows lack of common sense, and if it be his real name he should lie out of it. Being that of a Jewish poet whose songs the once-great German people were recently forbidden to sing, it might place him in danger when he goes back where he belongs.

Since "Heine II" favored us ignorant asses with his wisdom, we read that the Nazi Christians (so-called) have been ordered to dispense with the name Jehovah, as well as those of the Bible prophets, as "non-Aryan." Would not the venerated Martin Luther fancy seeing his beloved Bible—"das ist, die Heilige Schrift"—begin with the First Book of Adolf, or hearing a prophecy quoted from the second chapter of the Book of Goebbels? There were once good people in Germany, for many came here in time past. Evidently no more remain, or they are not allowed to say anything to reveal their presence there.

The writer is descended from the Schwaemmle of Schlesien, but, even so, has two things to be thankful for on Thursday—that more than half his ancestors are English, and that his name was given a more English appearance before he received it.

Why The Tide Turned

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The New Deal was a spiritual concept and as such it caught the imagination of the people. It moved forward as long as it remained a spiritual force. When some of its disciples, contrary to the plan of its leader, attempted to introduce into its structure political materialism it faltered.

Politicians are materialists. Political machines are built and maintained by extending special privileges to the anointed few. Man's obligation to his fellow man may be an excellent ideal but it has no place in the mind and attitude of the practical politician. Practical politicians are actuated by greed and selfish interest. However noble, therefore, may be the ends sought by any great movement—looking toward a better and fuller life for all people—it can be wrecked by the inevitable Judas.

Many reasons have been advanced for the seeming turn of the tide against the New Deal but upon close examination one will find that the real cause is the lack of faith on the part of the "practical" in the spiritual force of the ideal. Lot's wife, too, looked back.

Col. H. D. Lindsley

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the passing of the late Col. Henry D. Lindsley, first national commander of the American Legion, the United States has lost one of its outstanding figures in the military world. Fearlessly, he fought for the ideals for which the American Legion had been founded. In his passing the State of Texas has lost one of her outstanding citizens. May I pay tribute through your paper to the memory of a truly great man.

Why Walk?

IT MIGHT NOT be worth while to write about what happened to Jim, if it concerned Jim only. Even though the moral is obscure, what happened to Jim is a modern fable.

He was on his way to the courthouse. It was a good 2 miles, and allowing for a rest now and then he could figure on an hour's walk. The going was hard, but he was still able to make it, praise the Lord. The sun made the sweat roll, so that he stopped every 100 yards and got out his bandana. He set down his bucket of eggs before he mopped his forehead, groaning a little.

"Yes, Lawd," he said to himself. "Yes, Lawd." He was not calling on his Maker. The words expressed a feeling, not a thought, and he would have said "Yes, Lawd," if the feeling had been something entirely different. Just now, although he did not reason it out, his sentiment concerned the misery in his back, and the heat that was cooking the rheumatiz out of his bones. The coming of June made the winters easier to bear.

An automobile honked at him. He shifted his bucket and got farther into the ditch.

The automobile honked again; it had stopped. Jim looked up.

The driver was Mr. Jack Botts. "Get in, Jim," he said. Jim shook his head slowly. "Good mawnin', Mist' Botts. Thanky, suh, but I ain't much on ridin' automobiles."

Mr. Jack Botts wouldn't let him alone. "Aw, come on, man. I'll have you at the store in two minutes. If you walk, it'll take you half an hour or more. You're not going to waste all that time, are you?"

Jim didn't move. He was trying to think why he didn't want to ride.

"Are you scared? Look, I won't drive fast. It's a new car."

Jim shook his head.

"Well, look," said Mr. Jack Botts, "why don't you want to ride? Have you got any reason?"

Jim still couldn't think of any reason, so he climbed in. He sat very still.

"Lucky for you I came along," said Mr. Jack Botts. "This ride'll save you a big piece of your morning." Reason told Jim Mr. Botts was right, but when he got out in front of the store his legs had stiffened up again. Also, somehow he was not as glad to get to the store as usual. Usually he found a keg on the porch and rested himself on it, but now he didn't want to sit down, he wanted to move around. He might as well trade in his eggs and go on home.

He hurried on the return trip, he couldn't tell why. On the way by the barn he got the hoe so he wouldn't waste time coming back for it, and set out to chop his corn.

The chopping didn't go so well, and after a while he realized the sun wasn't hitting him right—it was too early. He went over and sat against the oak tree.

"Yoo-oo! Yoo-oo! Whe' you been? You want yo' dinner, you better come get it now. De greens b'iled down to nothin,."

Jim rubbed his eyes. When he got them open he was looking at Susie, his wife.

Susie went to work on him. "Ah swah, if you ain't de lazies', mos' good for nothines'—all mawnin' and not a stalk o' cawn hoed. You think de Lawd gonna provide for such as you?"

Jim struggled to his feet. "Don' fuss at me, Susie, he pleaded. "'Twas too early to hoe cawn. Mr. Jack Botts give me a ride." He knew he had been wronged in some way, but he couldn't justify himself.

Susie was a good wife. She relented.

"You come on an' eat some side meat, den," she said, and took him by the arm.

A black and tan hound poked his nose out from under the house. His jowls drooped and his eyes were sad. He walked toward Jim, and the stiffness of his legs as he moved was a sign of hostility. He started sniffing at Jim's trousers.

"You, Boomer!" Everything happened at once; the hound took a nip at Jim's ankle, Jim gave him a kick that sent him flying, and the dog fled under the house again with a long howl.

"What I want to kick that dog for?" Jim demanded. "He de bes' possum houn' I ever had." He investigated the offending trousers himself. "Ah don't smell more'n half human," he concluded. He could not place the odors, which were a compound of gasoline and rubber with a vague admixture of camphor and the chemicals which cling to new upholstery.

"Dis sure ain't my lucky day," he said at dinner. "Dis sure ain't my lucky day."

"Eat yo' bacon," said Susie. But Jim couldn't eat well; he was thinking, and he was not accustomed to thinking, and it upset his mastication.

"Dey ain't nothin' wrong with automobiles," he muttered. "An' dey ain't nothin' wrong with me."

"I got it! I got it!"

"You got de craziness in de head," said Susie.

"No, I ain't crazy. I got it. Dey ain't nothin' wrong with automobiles, and dey ain't nothin' wrong with me. We jus' ain't geared de same." He opened his mouth for a double forkful of greens.

Elevated Airports

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That proposed airport at Washington, to be located in the mud flat of the Potomac River, will give a few men some work, but the idea of flying from a mud flat will be out of date within a few years. It is an engineering certainty that our flying is going to be done from elevated steel platforms 400 feet off the ground, with controlled air currents to land the plane with absolute accuracy and safety.

It means safety in taking off and landing. It means great economy of operation. It means locating the outlet to the air in a convenient spot for the community, with the hangars and shops inside the steel frame. The landing surfaces will be only one-fourth as large as those at ground level. Flying men are not allowed to talk and land speculators and contractors do talk. The idea of the elevated site originated on Bare Hills at Baltimore, in 1928.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

A 'Nuisance City'

IT IS HEREBY earnestly proposed that the U. S. A. would be much better off if that big, sprawling incoherent, shapeless, slobbering civic idiot in the family of American communities, the city of Los Angeles, could be declared incompetent and placed in charge of a guardian like any individual mental defective. It is only a wistful thought, but the futility of hoping that this wise step might be taken just adds emphasis to the nuisance.

PEGLER

Los Angeles is the source and home of more political, economic and religious idiocy than all the rest of the country together and a concentration point of shiftless and inefficient culls who, being too lazy or lacking the ability to make good in their native regions, drift in expecting to be fed from heaven or the public pantry.

San Francisco, a city of character and manhood, has suffered greatly from the coolis competition of a rival having neither intelligence nor standards and is the first victim of the infantile giant to the South. The rest of the Nation, however, has had to contend with the Townsend Plan and the $30-every-Thursday scheme, and the influence of other absurdities emanating from Los Angeles has been bad.

THE COURTS are notorious for the silly conduct of clowns in silk, and adolescent jurors who condone premeditated murder and let killers loose because they bawl about love, and the religious travesties which thrive in this atmosphere have mocked sense and piety for years.

Nowhere but in Los Angeles could Upton Sinclair, admitting his inability to conduct his own enterprises successfully, have gathered the nucleus of a following which seriously threatened an important State with an economic hallucination described by one of his trusted lieutenants as the revolving of wheels within wheels. This was the plan by which a man with an old windmill who needed a pair of shoes and 2 pounds of stew meat traded the windmill to the owner of a gravel pit who traded gravel to a man building a concrete silo who gave him a calf whose hide became shoes on the feet and whose sinews became stew in the pot of the man whose necessities began the chain of transactions.

This, however, was a brief and simplified example of the commerce that was to have been imposed on California had the Spirit of Los Angeles been elected.

IN OTHER CASES the transformation of the second-hand windmill into shoes and stew would have ranged from end to end of the vast State—peaches for pork chops, mop-handles for chewing-gum, an axle for a saxophone lesson, and so forth, until hundreds of men had struck trades with others who miraculously happened to need exactly what was offered, and vice versa, and suddenly all settled down to the enjoyment of the things they needed most.

But Mr. Sinclair's plan was a model of practical distribution by comparison with the fantasies of others which have originated in Los Angeles, at least one of which, according to its author, who ran for Congress, came to him in thundered tones from an unseen speaker, believed to have been God, as he sat waiting his turn to expound his wisdom in a church.

Up to that moment he had never known anything about money or economics, but, when a minute later, he was called upon to speak, the ideal plan had been revealed to him out of the air, as he said, perfect in all its details.

LOS ANGELES is a region, not a city, with limits extended far beyond the practical ability of even a good city administration to govern, and extended for evil motives—not legitimate civic ambition. The town stretched to take in useless, worthless real estate, owned by foresighted grafters, and to advance the lines of defense against efforts to organize labor.

But neither the size of the place nor the incoherence of its government accounts for the lunacy which is characteristic of the place and for which it is known above every other characteristic. Nobody has been able to explain why Los Angeles is peculiarly susceptible to absurdities in all fields, particularly those of the mind and soul, and the solution seems hardly worth the bother. It is like trying to determine why a crazy man is crazy, but with a difference.

The difference is that the crazy man is recognized to be nuts and is placed under glass, whereas Los Angeles enjoys the rights and freedom of normal communities and sometimes half convinces people elsewhere there is nothing peculiar about cutting paper dolls.

Nazis Establish Special Court to Try Gangsters

Berlin, ov. 22.—Announcement was made yesterday of the setting up a special court for speeding the trying of gangsters "in view of a considerable increase" in crime of this type. There will be no primary inquiries, and no appeal against the verdict, which becomes valid and is executed immediately.

Erich Bodach, aged 26, of Geyersdorf, in the Province of Posen, and Alfred Kofer, 37, of Berlin, were executed here this morning on a charge of espionage and high treason.

Nazi Persecutions

More Reactions From Post Readers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "The German people do not approve." We hear that a lot in regard to shameful mistreatment of Jews. Some good German folk do not approve, but the very great bulk of them do heartily sanction this most monstrous crime of the century; otherwise, it could not take place. They would rise en masse and disavow these horrible acts and make restitution, if they did not indorse them. Thus, the German nation places itself entirely outside the pale of elementary decency.

This talk of appeasement is rot. You can humor or jolly along a maniac for a while, but appease never. The Fuehrer is boiling over with fury because the powers will not voluntarily return the former German colonies. He expects them to say, "Mr. Hitler, here are your colonies. We profoundly regret having taken them from Kaiser Bill, and what is your bill for the 20-odd years rent?"

Germany, by her heinous conduct, has forever forfeited all right, title, or claim to the colonies, nor is it at all likely that she will ever get them back. Regardless of what England says, the powerful South African Union has to be reckoned with. If Germany occupies Southwest Africa, her bombing fleets would blow Cape Town off the map in a few years. Certainly she is not wanted down there, and she knows it. What country would want to be adjacent to her? What country could feel secure when she is nearby?

Will Durant's Address

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The present world-wide protest of many people in various nations against the reprisals of Germany's government on Jews in Germany, because a German Jew assassinated a German official in France, suggests the advisability of asking Will Durant to repeat the address he made recently before the Jewish organizations here in Washington. The fact that Prof. Durant was to make the kind of an address he did was not well advertised, and hence few Gentiles heard it.

It was only by accident that I heard a rather interesting account of it from two Gentiles who did attend. On inquiry of several Jewish friends I got the same general understanding of what Durant said. These men and women each thought that the address should be repeated here, but to a larger audience.

Personally, I should like to hear it; and, on telling several Gentile friends about the substance of the address, they, too, said they would attend. I can imagine that Constitution Hall could be filled to capacity with the proper publicity. I for one will agree to do all I can to give the event publicity.

Prof. Durant needs no introduction to an American audience whether young or old. Two of his works, "The Story of Philosophy," and "Mansions of Philosophy," have become classics in the literature of the world.

Let's Get The Truth

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are evidently in an epoch of hysteria. Here is an Associated Press dispatch just sent to our country from one James A. Mills. We take his statements as authority if we are to take any Associated Press as authority. He says of Tel Aviv, the all-Jewish city in Palestine: "While the Arab insurgents are killing, robbing, burning, terrorizing . . . the Holy Land, Tel Aviv is pulsating with life opulent in prosperity. . . . It smiles, sings, dances and dreams. The city's numerous cabarets, dance halls and restaurants echo to the music of American jazz, the rumba, the big apple, the Lambeth walk and the 'shag.' . . . The gayly illuminated streets, flashy cinemas, seductive cabarets and multicolored neo lights remind one of Broadway. During the day the population . . . spends its time bathing on silvery beaches of the Mediterranean or in tanning itself in tropical sun."

If all this be true, then where is the sense of sorrow for the unfortunate? And if this be true, how can America get into a perfect hysteria of concern for the unfortunate? In fact, there is a missing link in much of what is passing in our country for truth concerning Palestine and the Jews. If one dispatch of this nature from our highest authority gives us the truth, then what of others which tell of grief which calls for world sympathy? I write this in no cavilly spirit, but to demand that before we of this country get into spasms over the sufferings of a particular race, as we did over the Armenians, we get the truth. It seems that we do not have it yet. J. O. KNOTT.

The Refugee Problem

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of November 19 there is an article referring to my address of yesterday before a D. A. R. unit dealing, in part, with the refugee problem.

Some readers of the article may conclude that I suggested a mere shift from Germany to Soviet Russia as a place for administering brutality to Jewish refugees. My proposition was that no people should be subjected to brutality anywhere, and that appropriate havens should be provided.

I pointed out that a Jewish autonomous territory, called Biro Bidjan, has been established in Soviet Russia as a republic exclusively for Jews; further that Soviet leaders are so friendly to Jews that anti-Semitism is punished as counter-revolution; that world Jewry, through a world-wide poll of Jewish communities, has honored Soviet Commissar Litvinov as one of the "110 greatest living Jews" making up the "Jewish Hall of Fame;" and that the Jewish organ, Opinion, of December, 1933, boasted that 61 per cent of Jewish officials exist in Soviet Russia with a Jewish population of only 2 per cent. In the January, 1934, issue of this Jewish organ, Opinion, it is denied that the Communist persecution of religion has injured the Jewish religion.

Consequently, those who wish to insure German Jews against further persecution could hardly find a better place than Soviet Russia, which claims to be the most prosperous nation in the world. In fact, Biro Bidjan might be expanded to accommodate Jewish refugees from every part of the world. It could be made a Jewish state, thereby solving the perplexing Jewish problem, and preventing further bloodshed in Palestine to dispossess Arabs from territory held by them nearly 2,000 years. All peoples have rights which should be respected. The non-Jews in Soviet Russia should not be enslaved and outraged forever, but should be permitted to depart as refugees as rapidly as other nations will accept them. Persecution of non-Jews is, of course, just as indefensible and outrageous as persecution of Jews.

Strained Relations

By Ernest Lindley

A New Deal For Jim Farley?

SINCE THE RECENT election, several New Dealers in the White House circle have begun to show a renewed curiosity concerning the thoughts and aims of James A. Farley. "Big Jim" has not concealed his low opinion of the political capacities of Thomas G. Corcoran, Harry L. Hopkins, and their collaborators. He avers stoutly that if the Democratic Party had not been harassed and divided by the "purge" it would not have suffered so many losses as it did on election day.

LINDLEY.

But even among the promoters and managers of the "purge," the need for conciliating the middle-of-the-road Democrats is conceded. The hand of peace may not reach to such extreme right-wingers as Senators Carter Glass, Harry F. Byrd and Josiah Bailey—although they will not be pushed away if they move a little closer to the White House. But it can hardly be extended at all without touching James A. Farley. For no influential Democrat who opposed the "purge" stands as close to the President as he does. In fact, he did not even oppose the "purge" in all cases; he was eager for the scalp of Senator Tydings, and his only objection to trying to discipline a few other wayward Democrats was a practical one—that the attempt would fail.

DESPITE the strained diplomatic relations between "Big Jim" and the White House circle of New Dealers, they are in agreement on many points. For example, "Big Jim" is opposed to the Presidential aspirations of Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, High Commissioner to the Philippines. His hostility dates back to McNutt's bottling up of the Roosevelt delegates from Indiana at the Democratic National Convention in 1932. Curiously—or perhaps it is characteristically—Mr. Farley has always felt much bitterer about that than the President has.

Now comes a Presidential boom for Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri. The forewarnings were audible nine months or more ago, when John N. Garner began to speak highly of him as a 1940 prospect. Senator Clark's overwhelming victory on election day as the candidate of all the chief factions in the party in his State—and apparently of some Republicans—has elevated his stock as a Presidential possibility. He has been against the New Deal on a few issues, but with it in several important fights.

REPORTS HAVE reached the White House that Senator Clark wants to be friendly and that he will take the lead at the coming session of Congress in urging the Democrats to close ranks.

But the New Dealers scout the suggestion that he could ingratiate himself at the White House to the point of winning the President's blessing as the head of the ticket in 1940. When last heard on that point—not so long ago—James A. Farley was in full agreement with the New Deal group.

"Big Jim" still says—as he always has said—that the Presidential nominee in 1940 must be a man who can be sure of the active support of Franklin D. Roosevelt. And he asserts—and, I think, believes—that Mr. Roosevelt's personal popularity is "as great as ever."

EVEN MORE significant is the fact that since the 1938 election Mr. Farley has expressed vigorously the view that the President can make peace with the conservatives in his party without yielding on any important policy. He has put it in even stronger language—that the President doesn't need to yield "an inch." Few New Dealers have gone that far. Most of them are ready to yield several inches, to straighten out their line, although they expect the President to stand firm in the defense of every important gain.

They agreed with him on so many important matters that it seems nonsensical for the New Dealers in the White House circle to continue to treat "Big Jim" as a pariah. But there are imposing practical obstacles in the way of a rapprochement. They can't welcome Jim Farley into the fold without ushering themselves out. He was never annoyed by the liberals in the Administration so long as they kept out of his province. But they have invaded his province, and he won't grant them squatters' rights.

THE NEW DEALERS can't retire from the province of political management without giving up their fight to nominate one of their own as Mr. Roosevelt's successor. And in that fight they undoubtedly have at this stage the backing of the President. Whether or not he taps Harry L. Hopkins or Harold L. Ickes or Robert H. Jackson in 1940, he unquestionably is eager to see that a big block of delegates committed to liberal candidates is assembled for the next national convention.

While the New Dealers are cogitating, Jim Farley is going about his duties as national chairman—conferring with party leaders in the East and West, preparing for the Jackson Day dinners, at which he hopes to raise $175,000. He doesn't seem to be very much worried about himself. Sooner or later, he probably thinks, the President will need him.

The Federal Diary

GOV. BLANTON WINSHIP, of Puerto Rico, is in town for his eighteenth return here since he became Governor some five years ago. They gave him a party Monday in the Willard Hotel and he went through the customary ritual of denying reports that he will resign the governorship. The thing is beginning to pain him. Because he gets the question both in the island and in Washington.

But in the island the watchful politics have a system, that tells definitely whether the Governor—on his frequent trips to Washington—will return. It is based on whether the Governor takes his dog away with him. They know the Governor is devoted to the dog; that when he leaves the dog will go with him. On one occasion the politics down there called at the Governor's residence, during his absence, and made attendants let the dog bark through the telephone as a proof that the dog was there and that the Governor would return from the States. The thing is being carried to that extreme.

The contest for the selection of "Miss Civil Service" is attracting a growing number of candidates, and more are urged to participate. And may we again emphasize that the contest is designed in no way toward picking the outstanding beauty in the service. Looks will have nothing to do with the selection; the winner will be the lady who seems most to be the ideal feminine employe in the District of Columbia—and age has nothing to do with the case. The winner will receive a handsome loving cup; the award will be made during the celebration of National Civil Service Week, January 15-21. The more candidates the merrier—but PLEASE, THE CONTEST IS NOT ONE OF BEAUTY NOR PERSONALITY. It simply aims toward selecting the ideal feminine employe and all women who have civil service status are eligible.

MARVIN M. McLEAN, long prominent in Washington civic circles and in the Department of the Interior, where he is associate attorney for the General Land Office, retires today, the exact date of the forty-fifth anniversary of his entrance into the Federal service.

Prominent in civic activities, Mr. McLean has been president of the Brookland Citizens Association for 20 years; chairman of the board of managers of the King David Lodge, F. A. A. M., and chairman of the board of trustees of the Brookland Methodist Church for 30 years. He was born in Sherman, Tex., on November 5, 1867, and reached the statutory age of 70 years last November, but was extended for an additional year by order of the President.

Entering the service as clerk in the Labor Department 45 years ago, he served in that position until August 7, 1903, when he was transferred to the General Land Office. In February, 1913, he became superintendent of the Dead Letter Office, Postoffice Department, remaining in that post until 1921. He recalled yesterday that during the World War a part of his duty was a careful scrutiny of foreign mails to uncover international spy plots.

On February 9, 1921, he returned to the Interior Department to become associate attorney, holding the position until today, when he retired. He plans to engage in the real estate business in Brookland.

Death Of Song

[The Lorelei, most German of songs and equally beloved by Germans and Americans, has now been banned by the Nazi educational department because the poet, Heinrich Heine, was a Jew. Surely, then, and in all reverence, the Lorelei might be rewritten.]

With too much pain in knowing the weight of Sorrow's crown, we'll watch the storm wrack blowing a nation's vineyards down. The air grows dark with passion, and fiercely flows the Rhine, while vengeful specters fashion a death more red than wine.

The god of war, bestriding the rock that cleaves the stream, waits there, in fell abiding, to quench love's last, sad gleam. His bitter sword unsated, he sings his bitter song, of blood and iron mated, and despot's blood-flecked thong.

O German poet sailing thy dream-enchanted skiff! Beware the war god's flailing, beware his midnight cliff. Thy sweet and gladsome winging shall drown beneath the wave. The war god's hammer, ringing, shall build thy deathless grave.

The Peace Plot

THOMAS MANN, at once the greatest German writer of this century, and the greatest living man of letters, speaks out with magnificent bitterness in "This Peace" (Knopf, $.75).

He knew what fascism was, he says; he did not know that the so-called democracies which had seemed the bulwark of all for which the word "Europe" stood were themselves so rotted with sympathy for fascism. "There prevailed in the capitalist democracies of the west," he sees, a sentiment stronger than any antipathy for Nazi Germany's mob rule and gangsterdom, for its debasement of moral standards, its shattering effect on cultural values; a sentiment stronger even than its fear of the anarchistic theory of nationalism, so perilous to the security of all established states. I mean the nightmare of bolshevism, the dread of socialism and of Russia. This it was that brought about the capitulation of democracy."

He traces the steps which led to the ultimate surrender, the concessions long denied to democratic German regimes, lightly made to the Nazis: the return of the Saar, the Anglo-German naval agreement, the march into the Rhineland made, Thomas Mann declares, "under the aegis of Great Britain;" the fall of Austria, and, finally, the enslavement of Czechoslovakia.

In all this the English conservatives have been as blind as were the German conservatives on the eve of the Nazi dictatorship. "It is uncanny to see how the wretched figure of Von Papen, the conservative who delivered up Germany to Hitler, recurs again in the English Chamberlain. Everything is the same: the treachery, the underlying motives, above all the fundamental self-deception"—for in both cases conservatism surrendered itself to forces which are in fact "a lower form of bolshevism, on a lower moral plane and without the humanitarian element." The only difference was that Chamberlain had a power to curb Hitler which Von Papen lacked!

For the bestialities which today clot the front pages of the newspapers, the England of Neville Chamberlain, Thomas Mann insists, must bear the full and shameful responsibility.

"ONE OF THE FOULEST pages in history," Dr. Mann calls it. "The plot was formed and carried out by a politically powerful clique of international interests over the heads of the people whose hearts are full to overflowing that 'war was averted' . . . a cruel practical joke played on their justified and universal fear of war—a war which was never intended, which, despite all the gas masks, blackouts and trenches, never seriously threatened . . .

"What else could it be but hypocrisy, to believe as though one believed in these pulings about 'our brothers in Sudetenland,' when everybody knew that it was not a question of the brothers, but of the Skoda Works, Czech industry; Rumanian oil, Hungarian grain, Germany's economic penetration eastward, the liquidation of Czechoslovakia as a military and diplomatic factor, the break-up of the French and Russian alliance and the isolation of France?"

Never was it necessary, Thomas Mann charges, "to save peace by means of treachery, by yielding to dishonor and by making of France a nation defeated and incapable of alliances. Peace was to be had, quite simply and in complete security, only if the western states, certain of the moral support of America, had stood shoulder to shoulder with Russia for the protection of Czechoslovakia . . . Twenty-four hours of firm resolves on the part of the mild-mannered democracies whose compliance had so maddened us, and the author of all our sufferings, the corrupter of Europe, would have played out his hand; European fascism would be physically, mentally, morally finished; and the way would be open for a new social humanism, upon which the best minds of the age were everywhere at work; for the return of the genius of peace, of labor and of human dignity."

That could not be—because the governing classes of England did not want it. They wanted the triumph of fascism. They got it.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Inside Germany

IT WILL BE a great mistake to regard what is happening in Germany as primarily a Jewish matter. A senseless gangster, Bolshevism, which for five years has been held somewhat in check by the more conservative elements, has broken out. The leading spirits in Germany today are Streicher, the madman of Nuremberg, and Goebbels, the "minister of enlightenment," who is totally ruthless, totally cynical, a careerist revolutionary of the marat type.

DOROTHY THOMPSON.

Germany, a great, industrious, civilized people, is in the hands of a gang, and the German government is a super-racket. The foreign correspondents have been trying for five years to tell the world that this was the condition of affairs.

The representatives of the British, American and French press stationed in Berlin have, with negligible exceptions, been unanimous on this from the first.

Robert Dell, the veteran correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, wrote a book in the spring of 1934, "Germany Unmasked," which opens with a quotation from a diplomatist at that time stationed in Berlin. "The conditions here are not those of a normal civilized country, and the German government is not a normal civilized government and cannot be dealt with as such."

UNFORTUNATELY the conservative government of Great Britain and, since M. Bonnet became foreign minister, the government of France did not listen to their own experts. Mr. Chamberlain's advisers have not been his foreign office: His advisers have been a personal clique.

The action precedent to Munich was not taken on the advice of the Quai d'Orsay or of the French General Staff.

The anarchy in Europe is a direct result of personal government, the obstinate inability of the old conservatives to believe anything as utterly fantastic as the truth about what was going on, the inability of the British conservatives to abandon a policy when that policy had been outdated by new events, the fear of people like M. Bonnet of the radicalism of the French workers, and the obstinately held conviction that Nazism was a maintainer of property rights.

Since the conservative government came into power in England in 1931 its policy has been to give Germany a free hand in the east against Russia. It has never abandoned that policy.

It has been terrified by bolshevism and has thought that it would be a very good thing to let Germany clean up the "Russian experiment."

So enamored has it been of this idea that it has never taken a really good look at the sort of "experiment" that was going on in Germany. If it had, it would have seen that, except for words and slogans, the two "experiments" were rapidly approaching each other.

THE REAL NATURE of Nazism has been concealed behind the front of the German diplomacy and the German bureaucracy as a whole, which the Nazi regime took over intact.

This bureaucracy and diplomacy is loyal to Germany, to Germany as such, no matter what regime may be directing them. The bureaucracy is extremely efficient, patriotic, loyal, confident of its own abilities, and politically stupid.

The same can be said of the German army, whose esprit de corps is superb but who have always constituted a sort of state within a state, with a motto to let politics alone as long as politics lets it alone.

The bureaucracy, the army and the foreign office have kept their positions, furnished a respectable front, believed, no doubt, that they were much more powerful than they were or are, and that they could "influence" events while, step by step, the Nazi Party, which is nothing more or less than a gang, destroyed every vestige of legitimate government in Germany.

The bureaucracy and the diplomacy, as well as every instrument of public opinion, now work with pistols at their backs.

Every kind of political, economic or social organization which might have restored order has been demolished. There are no political parties except the Nazi Party, and it is not a party at all but a horde blindly following absolute dictation.

There are no trade unions which might have mobilized the working classes. Even the churches have become underground movements in so far as they remain religious bodies.

THE ONLY THING that kept the Nazis in check was the fear of outside intervention, the fear, that is to say, of war. That fear not only kept them in check externally. It kept them in check internally.

There was always the chance that in a showdown with any formidable outside force the army would mutiny or its most important officers resign en bloc.

There was always the fear that with arms in their hands, the people would find new leaders to overthrow this terror.

Again the conservative governments abroad were afraid of the latter. They thought that the result would be "bolshevism." But the German people have most probably had their fill of bolshevism. They want peace and quiet, the end of terror, order, legitimate government and the reestablishment of a few civil freedoms.

THE LAST CHECK on the Nazis was removed by the conquest of Czechoslovakia, because with that conquest Britain and France made themselves powerless for unforeseeable time. They gave away thirty-four divisions, enormous manpower reserves, fortifications and munitions industries which were on the precise spot where they would be most effective.

At the same time they confused the public opinion of the world and go on confusing it in the effort to plead their own case for bringing on the greatest catastrophe in many decades of history.

SECURE NOW externally and internally, the Nazi gang has gone berserk. That is to say, it is behaving according to its real nature. It is beginning a wholesale confiscation with the Jewish people and adding a new highjacking refinement. The papers report that all Jewish children are required in the schools to write the names and addresses of relatives abroad.

The intention is simply to hold up these relatives for ransom money to fill the coffers of a looted treasury.

I hear on excellent authority that Albert Voegler, one of the officers and directing minds of the Vereinigte Stahlwerke—the great steel trust—is arrested. Count Westarp, for many years chairman of the German Nationalist Party—the party of the junkers—is in prison under a 15 years' sentence.

Dr. Schacht is still president of the Reichsbank, vainly trying to keep his hands on the nation's money. His name is never mentioned in the German press today.

And a new decree says that the Nazis will from now on exercise a veto power over the managements of all industries, with the power to remove from the direction of them any one they choose.

THE ONLY HOPEFUL sign is in England, where the by-elections indicate that the British people are beginning to wake up, despite the fact that the Chamberlain government is doing everything in its power to prevent them from getting at the real story of what has happened in the last six weeks.

Vernon Bartlett, a well-known radio commentator and journalist, extremely well informed, has left the position of spectator, and standing alone, without any party behind him, won a sweeping victory a few days ago in a Conservative stronghold.

'The Great Waltz' Tops All Film Operettas

Introduces a Gorgeous New Voice
Tallulah Bankhead to Christen Train
Notes and Gossip of Amusements

IT IS not often that the more or less case-hardened ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the drama desks burst into applause at the conclusion of a two-hour preview. They did yesterday afternoon, after having witnessed the manifold glories of "The Great Waltz." It seems a safe prophesy that the general public will tear down the house, no less, when this magnificently produced operetta reaches the screen at Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow.

BELL

In "The Great Waltz," Washington will discover a Thanksgiving present of overwhelming beauty—beauty of scene, beauty of music, beauty of voice, beauty of instrumentation and superlative beauty of photography. This column feels no hesitancy in proclaiming this stupendous work the most completely satisfying of its kind it ever has been hypnotized by in more than three decades of screen-gazing.

The sensation of this picture will be Miliza Korjus, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's newest European importation, who assumes the role of Carla Donner, the opera star, to Fernand Gravet's Johann Strauss II and Luise Rainer's ingenuous and heroic Poldi Vogelhuber. Miss Rainer, of course, already is known as a two-time Academy award winner. Mr. Gravet has yet to offer a mediocre performance in an American film. But it is the gorgeous Korjus who will prove the complete revelation. Miss Korjus is one of those richly endowed human beings who seem to "have everything"—beauty, charm, voice, vivacity, grace, poise, acting ability and that priceless quality known by the crass and ugly term of "sex appeal."

Korjus, in the dazzled opinion formed in this corner an hour or so after having seen her image on the screen for the first time, combines the blonde beauty of a Lillian Russell, an earlier Mae West and a Madeleine Carroll with the voice of a Galli-Curci and the physical grace of a Genee or a Pavlova. Her voice is a limpid and crystal-clear soprano of remarkable range and of equal beauty in every register. It finds thrilling outlet in the best of the Strauss compositions, constituting the sum total of the tremendously effective score that distinguishes "The Great Waltz." The release of the picture inevitably must quickly exhaust the supply of her phonograph recordings.

But perhaps, despite all these abounding qualities of superior excellence, the outstanding distinction of "The Great Waltz" is to be attributed to the marvelously minute and painstaking direction of Julien Duvivier, whose recent French-made picture of "Life Dances On" aroused the enthusiasm of both critics and public on both sides of the Atlantic not so long ago. Given the obviously unlimited resources of one of the world's greatest studios, with no stint laid upon any department of production, Duvivier has turned out a masterpiece of artistic and imaginative picture-making.

His development of the inspiration and composition of Strauss' "Tales of the Vienna Woods" and "The Blue Danube," together with their later perfection in formal performance, comprises the basis of two of the most remarkable motion picture sequences ever conceived and captured in celluloid.

By the time of Friday morning's detailed review, I hope to be able to dig up a few words that will do "The Great Waltz" justice.

There being no new battleship conveniently available, Miss Tallulah Bankhead, currently starring in Zoe Akins' comedy of "I Am Different," at the National, this afternoon at 3:30 by the clock, will step out and perform a comparably interesting bit of extra-curricular work by christening a new Baltimore and Ohio streamlined train at Union Station. Since this is almost as near "show business" as the B. & O. has approached since its "Exposition of the Iron Horse," back in 1927, it might be all right to say here that the streamlined Capitol Limited will be on exhibition to the public at the station from 10 a. m. to 3 p. m. On the head end will be one of the new 3,600 h. p. Diesel electric engines. Miss Bankhead also will be invited to ride the B. & O.'s famous Civil War train, with the William Mason locomotive hauling the old, yellow coaches. This old-timer is making a special run to the Capital from Baltimore to bring Miss Bankhead's feminine escort to town, garbed in the picturesque styles of the 1860's. The daughter of the Speaker of the House will be guest of honor at a reception in one of the streamlined coaches of the new train, following the christening ceremony.

On Friday, Saturday and Sunday, December 9, 10 and 11, the Rialto Theater will present what is described as "an outstanding motion picture," bearing the name of "Professor Mamlock."

"Professor Mamlock" is said to be "a crushing indictment of the Nazi terror," written by the renowned German author, Friedrich Wolf, who underwent the indignity and persecution of imprisonment in the concentration camps. The film was produced in the U. S. S. R., and acted by famous artists of the Moscow Art Theater.

The Carolinas, home of "The Big Apple," proved Monday night, at Loew's Capitol Theater, that they are "some shakes" as waltzers, too. They captured first and third prizes in the zone finals of the waltzing contest inspired by release of "The Great Waltz." First award of the judges was won by 18-year-old Lucille Wiley and Gene Stokes, 3 years her senior, representing Myrtle Beach, S. C. Martha Benitez and Pablo Santana, the Washington entries, captured second honors and third went to Helen Owenby and Melville Zollicoffer, from Greensboro, N. C. Miss Wiley and Mr. Stokes won a silver cup bearing the autographs of Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet and Miliza Korjus, stars of the picture, and the right to enter the national finals to be held in Madison Square Garden next month.

Speaking of Dancing, Chaney and Fox, the favorite dancers of the White House, headlining this week's stage bill at the Earle Theater, will give a free lesson in the currently popular Lambeth Walk on the Earle stage this morning at 9 o'clock. No admission or other fee will be charged for this gratuitous lesson, which will be given by the famous dancers before the theater is opened for the first regular performance. The Lambeth Walk, so one hears, is simple and easy to learn. It is being featured, among other dances of a more intricate nature, by Chaney and Fox at the Earle this week.

From all present indications the midnight preview of "The Citadel," at Loew's Capitol tonight, for the benefit of the Library for the Blind, will be a complete sellout. The patronesses in charge of the benefit have disposed of tickets representing two-thirds of the capacity of the 3,400-seat house and public window sale should take care of the remainder. In case of a large oversale, the Palace probably will be thrown open for an overflow screening of the picture starring Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell. So now you know.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 22.—When the beauticians see the new R. K. O. picture, "Beauty for the Asking," I imagine they'll be pretty disappointed. The keynote of it is that the beauty business is largely a matter of bluff. It shows Frieda Inescourt taking the bumps. No! They take the bumps off her. She goes in dowdy, comes out a gilded lily.

HEDDA HOPPER

But there's much more to this beauty business than that. During my short sojourn with Arden a sweet little old lady came in and asked if anything could be done with her face in two weeks. I must say it looked like a railroad terminal.

I naturally asked why only a fortnight! Her reply was that in two weeks her son was being married to a lovely girl whose mother was fresh and beautiful. She couldn't shame her boy by standing up looking the way she did. She'd had so much illness and grief she hadn't been able to think about herself for five years. She got more than the works. She got the whole salon, and came out radiant.

With tears pouring down her face, she acknowledged her gratitude. That is the sort of thing that goes on daily behind closed doors—but that's not the sort of thing we will see in a beauty picture.

Incidentally, Pat Knowles, who is playing the lead, takes his baby Michael to visit his grandparents in England for the holidays. Then on to South Africa to see his brother, who had an heir three months after Pat. Years ago it was agreed that the first grandson should be called Michael. Pat won!

I'll wager Eddie Cantor will do "Ziegfield Girl," the sequel to "The Great Ziegfield." Here's why. He has a one-picture commitment at M. G. M. where William Anthony McGuire is to produce the Ziegfield opus. Bill wrote Cantor's best—"Kid Boots," and "Whoopee" for the stage and "Kid from Spain" and "Roman Scandals" for the screen. So it looks like a happy reunion.

No one can quibble over the line-up selected to judge the Movie Quiz contest: Mrs. Ogden Reid, Bruce Barton, Dr. James E. West, head of Boy Scouts; Helen Wills Moody and William Van Loon. Smart picking.

Penny Makes A Few Out of Her New Game

Guests Work, Too Share in Profits Has Long Contract

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Nov. 22.—Dorothy McNulty, who changed her name to Penny Singleton because her correspondents insisted upon crossing the "L," is the only movie star in all Hollywood, insofar as we know, who does her own housework.

That's something in a town of first and second butlers, but it's only the beginning. She stars in the pictures, cooks for her dentist husband, cares for her 3-year-old daughter, writes poetry, and when her friends drop in she makes 'em play a new kind of game.

Instead of bridge or anagrams or anything like that, she hands all the callers paper and pencil and has them play "scenario writing." This is a fascinating and amusing game—and profitable. La Singleton takes all the scribbling, correlates it, types it, and sells the result to the movie studios for cash in large chunks.

Six on a Scenario

"A few evenings ago," she said, "I had a little party. We had four guests. My husband and I sat down at the table with them and we started the game by looking through the newspaper for an idea.

"Right away we came upon a little story about a cowboy who had inherited a city night club and didn't know what to do with it. So we went on from there. After a lot of argument, but before it was time to serve the refreshments, we had concocted a story about a cowboy who inherited a New York hot spot. He went there, to find that it was being run by gangsters. That made the conflict. Then we added the love interest and had our hero eventually routing out the gangsters and making a big success with his sweetheart in the only cowboy night club in New York.

"Afterward Blake Baldwin, who was one of the guests, and I got together on putting the story down consecutively on paper, and we sold it to Warner Brothers for a movie scenario. It's called 'Broadway Buckaroo,' and it ought to go into production soon.

Will Split With Guests

"I'm being paid well for it. I haven't collected the actual cash yet, but when I do I'll divide it with everybody who was at the party, and the guests will appreciate a nice fat check a lot more than they would a hangover."

Miss Singleton, then known as Dorothy McNulty and often called Dorothy McNutty, was a Philadelphia school girl not many years ago.

She was sickly. The doctor recommended a physical culture school. At the end of a year she was the star pupil—as good an acrobat as any professional. She got into vaudeville, almost joined the circus and eventually wound up in Shubert musical comedies. She was in such productions as "Great Temptations," "Sky High," "Sweetheart Time" and "Good News."

Jessel Got Her Hired

She branched out into dramatic and comedy roles in "Co-respondent Unknown," "Three Men on a Horse," "Sailor Beware" and "Personal Appearance." Then she came to Hollywood. Her old musical comedy friend, George Jessel, was working as a producer at Warner Brothers. He got her a job in the picture, "Swing Your Lady." That was last year.

The film was one of the funniest of the season. The New York critics wondered who the new star, Penny Singleton, might be. They didn't recognize her as their old pal, Dorothy McNulty.

She has played in a dozen pictures since and now she has gone into the lead in the Columbia comedy series, "Blondie."

"I have signed a contract to play Blondie in 30 pictures," she said. "It'll take seven years to do it."

12 P. M.: "Danny Fields, one of Gurrah's co-defendants in the Goldis murder case, is turning State's evidence," a city official assures at the Paradise. "That's the case on which Dewey campaigned for District Attorney." . . . "Jessel spoke at this dinner last night," an agent reports at the Versailles, "and told a censorable gag—not knowing it was being broadcast. As soon as George was tipped off to the fact that a radio audience was listening—and had heard the gag—he announced: 'This is Jolson speaking.'" . . . "Noel Coward told me this," a Britisher relates at the Casa Manana. "He applied for a gas mask in London, tried one—and was asked: 'Can you breathe?' "Well, I'm not here any more," Mary confesses. "I'm living at a home for the aged. But every once in a while I get lonesome and come back here." . . . "C. C. N. Y.'s Drama Society will present Bob Sherwood's anti-war play, 'Idiot's Delight,' this week-end," one of the cast informs at Le Coq Rouge. "We're rehearsing this anti-war play in the only space available—our R. O. T. C. Armory." . . . "Just got a wire from Burgess Meredith," Orson Welles states at El Rio. "He addressed it this way: 'The Martian, N. Y.'—and it was delivered to me immediately."

2 A. M.: "When 'Too Many Cooks,' the new Nero Wolfe mystery, was published recently," an editor reports at the Game Cock, "Rex Stout, Saturday Evening Post editor, got a letter asking how to cook kid to make it taste like venison. Stout sent her a recipe and added 'I'm not very good at cooking kid, but I'm swell at kidding cook.'"

3 A. M.: "No, I won't run for Parliament," Noel Coward declares at the Stork Club, "because I know nothing about politics. After all, I've devoted so many years to the theater, and on opening nights I still get that nervous feeling. So imagine how I'd feel making a political speech." . . . "Some friends of mine spoke to the President last week," a Washington official informs at El Gaucho. 4 A. Sure I'll pose—but with Bob Burns.' The Senator posed, but without Burns—who is from Arkansas." . . . "The State psychiatrists, preparing the probation report, went to examine Robert Irwin last week," a penal officer confides at the Kit Kat. "Irwin threw a pail of water at them." . . . "You look just like Charles Peletti," Jack White, maddest of Broadway's comics, greets a ringsider at the 18 Club. "I should," replies the Lieut. Gov.-elect, "because I am."

5 A. M.: "The ears of two Brooklyn magistrates should be burning now," a jurist whispers at Lindy's. "Because Louis Kassman, the bondsman who was arrested, is spilling his story to Special Prosecutor Amen." . . . "Say, you slice the roast beef perfectly," the headwaiter at Reuben's tells John Lamm, the new assistant chef . . . "I know how to use the knife," Lamm explains. "I've just arrived from Germany. There I was a surgeon." . . . "I'll never forget," Dorothy Parker reminisces at Longchamps, "that snowy day I walked down Fifth avenue with Mabel Normand, then at the height of her film-comedy fame. Mabel wore a sable coat, and I told her how nice the coat looked. 'Hold it,' she said, 'and I'll show you how I got it.' She took a running start, flopped to the icy pavement and slid along the street."

6 A. M.: ". . . and so I took the scissors and gave George his first haircut . . . What? . . . I'm a good barber? . . . No, I'm not . . . Well, because I couldn't talk him into taking a shampoo and tonic."

Actor's Dog Gains Screen Reputation

Dennis O'Keefe's Great Dane Thor is following in his master's footsteps as a thespian.

He took the dog to appear in the dog show scene in "Hold That Kiss," together with Maureen O'Sullivan's Dalmatian, Roger, and the dogs of several other stars.

Rennie Renfro, his neighbor in the San Fernando Valley, trainer of dogs for screen work, saw the animals and persuaded O'Keefe to let him train Thor in a complete routine with Eleanor Powell in "Honolulu." The dog is one of the largest specimen of lion-colored Danes in the West.

Kolb With Powell

Clarence Kolb, of the old musical comedy team of Kolb and Dill, the Weber and Fields of the Pacific Coast, will play an important role in the new Eleanor Powell picture, "Honolulu."

Two-Gun Guy

JAMES CAGNEY, who shoots his way into the electric chair in "Angels With Dirty Faces," opening Friday at the Earle, and next will be seen, as above, in "Oklahoma Kid"

Old Hat Proves Van a Sure Shot

A slouch hat with four bullet holes in it, evidence of the marksmanship of W. S. Van Dyke, today makes its second appearance in a film scene, after a lapse of more than ten years.

It was worn today by Character Actor Fred Warren for a fight scene of "Stand Up and Fight," with Robert Taylor and Wallace Beery. Warren had dug it out of a wardrobe trunk as a memento of the Tim McCoy Western, "California," in which Van Dyke twice shot it off Warren's head from a distance of 20 yards during a scene.

Abundance of Fathers

Rita Johnson, playing in "Honolulu" and "Katherine the Last" at the same time, has two fathers at the moment. In "Honolulu" it is Clarence Kolb and in "Katherine" it is Walter Connolly.

Air Pictures Make Actors Real Pilots

When actors work in motion pictures depicting aviation, the flying industry benefits in more ways than one.

This was revealed in a survey made in connection with Paramount's Technicolor cavalcade of the air, "Men With Wings." The survey showed that many of the actors take up flying after appearing in air pictures.

The first actor-aviator to qualify was Wallace Beery, who still flies his own plane. He got the "bug" when he worked in "Now We're in the Air" with Raymond Hatton back in 1925. Shortly after this Ben Lyon was bitten by the desire to make passes at clouds, his enthusiasm arising from "Hell's Angels."

Reginald Denny, who flew as an observer during the war found his interest quickened as a result of his work in flying pictures. Ken Maynard, the Western star, got his enthusiasm when he made a modern Western tale which involved the use of airplanes.

Fred MacMurray, featured with Ray Milland and Louise Campbell in "Men With Wings," admits he decided to fly after making "Thirteen Hours by Air" for Paramount. He took several lessons—and then Mrs. MacMurray said "No!" Robert Cummings worked in "Border Patrol," went out and bought himself an airplane.

It took "Her Jungle Love" to interest Archie Twitchell. He now has 25 hours of flying to his credit.

Ray Milland was a pilot in England before he came to the United States.

American Actor Selected as Briton

An American actor has been chosen by London theater fans as the "most typical young Briton," it was disclosed in letters received at Paramount studio from London.

The actor is John Howard, who was born in Cleveland, Ohio.

The selection was made recently when Howard won a film favorites contest conducted by the Carton Theater of London. The actor has starred in the "Bulldog Drummond" series, the latest of which is "Arrest Bulldog Drummond." The central figures of the series are English and the locale is England.

Because of the role, which has continued through several pictures, many of the British fans believe that Howard is a native of England.

Xmas Trees for Set

The Christmas season started six weeks early at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer when six truckloads of Christmas trees were brought in to decorate interior sets for "Stand Up and Fight."

Your Figure

Settled Air Is Aging To Figure

Exercise Is Cure But You Must Work Can Shed Yrs. in Week Kicking Is Good

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE STUPID woman who strives to stay eternally young succeeds only in looking "well preserved." But the clever woman is thought of as ageless, and that is mainly because she never lets her figure settle down.

The charm of youth clings convincingly to the woman who follows a sensible program of exercise to keep her circulation active and her figure supple, with slim waist, trim hips and a flat tummy.

Once you have let your figure settle, you must expect to work to get rid of those excess inches that make you feel and look older, and to step up your circulation so that you have your old sparkle. When you get into the swing of the good old hardening-up process, however, you will be amazed at the swiftness of your progress. In a week you will seem to shed years—especially when you are bent on streamlining the midsection. This part of the figure usually needs exercise most, but the slimming goes faster and that is plenty of compensation.

Exercises Are Fun

Here are some exercises to wake up those lazy midriff muscles, and they are fun to do:

The first one is to kick an old sofa pillow. This is hard on the pillow, but equally hard on fat pads about the hips and tummy. Hold the pillow straight out before you, let it drop, kick it high into the air and catch. Begin with 25 kicks, alternating the legs, and gradually increase to 100 kicks. Be sure that you swing from the hips.

For the exercise given next you need a straight chair with a narrow seat and a rod. Tuck the feet firmly back of the two front legs of the chair to hold the hips still, and hold the rod back of the shoulders to keep them straight. This gives the midriff muscles the full benefit of the workout—if you remember to pull up with the lower abdominal wall!

Twist the Waist

Now, you are all set. Twist vigorously at the waist, first in one direction then the other, turning as far to the side as possible each time. There is no better exercise for the waist and tummy, but it is strenuous work for muscles that have been allowed to go soft. Begin with just six times and gradually increase to 20.

The last exercise is for the buttocks and waistline. You simply swing alternate legs backward from the hips, at the same time stretching arms high overhead. The arms are lowered between each swing of the hips. Always keep the tummy pulled up. You may do this exercise as many times as you please.

As we grow older, it is all too easy to exercise as little as possible. This is the time of life that exercise is needed most to keep the heart and lungs in excellent condition, as a stimulus to the circulation and to aid digestion and elimination. You cannot keep fit without exercise—let alone stay young!

Dashing Skating Costume

Many blithe young hearts will beat a faster tattoo tonight when the Capital's long-awaited ice palace opens its glittering entrance. The invigorating sport of skating can be given just the proper lighthearted touch by a rollicking outfit such as the witty, yet practical Alpine suit above. It's bright Botany woolen blouse has all the naïveté of a school boy's suit. Yet this same silver-buttoned blouse proves it practicality by terminating its career in shorts. Sensible action. Pouring Tea

"May I serve you some tea? . . . No? . . . Really I can't seem to sell anybody tea . . . Oh how do you do, Mrs. Muffin? May I serve you some tea? . . . Now really you oughtn't to let me down like that . . . nobody seems to like tea, I can't decide whether it's me or that punch bowl over there . . . Oh hello Marge! Of course it's no use to ask you if you want tea.

("Say darling, would you mind bringing me a cup of that punch? This thing's about to get me down.)

"How do you do, Mrs. Sailem? Now I know you want tea . . . No, now really I didn't mean it that way at all . . . No really I think drinking tea is a very lovely custom. It's so English. I know at home we used always to have tea . . .

("Thanks Marge . . . Say this has really got a kick in it. I WISH you'd look at Mabel Whittle taking another sandwich! That's her fifth! . . . Yes, I counted.)

"May I serve you some tea, Mrs. Portleigh? . . . Oh, a sandwich! . . . Yes do help yourself . . . Oh, thank you. I simply adore pouring tea. I always feel so genteel. And so respectable—Oh, Marge, come here please! . . .

("Say Marge, can you get me another cup of punch? . . . What? . . . Not Bacardis! Well for Heavens' sakes, bring me one quick!)

"How do you do, Mrs. Tippy? May I serve you some tea? . . . Oh, you aren't? . . . Not even tea? . . . Yes I know positively everybody's got nervous indigestion now . . . Oh, Mrs. Gadd! What about some tea? . . . The cocktails? . . . Well, I heard there were some in the other room . . .

("Marge, you're darling. Just set it there behind the teapot. Say, Mabel Whittle's on her sixth sandwich now . . . Yes, and Mrs. Portleigh's on her fourth. Hand me a canape, will you?)

"Oh, Mrs. Worth, I'm so glad to see you! I know you'll take tea—no what I mean is, of course, maybe you won't. Oh you will! How grand! Do you like your's with a kick? . . . Lemon or cream? . . . How many lumps? . . . Now there you are! . . . What? . . . Why it is! Just water! Don't tell me I forgot to put in the tea! Wait I'll fix you another cup . . . Oh, Marge!

("Say darling, I believe I could stand another Bacardi. I've got 15 more minutes here—now look at that! Mrs. Tippy with a cocktail glass! And she told me she had nervous indigestion.)

"May I serve you some tea, Mrs. Musher? . . . Oh, I beg your pardon! Of course, Mrs. Piddler, I know you as well as I know myself. It's just that there's so much smoke in the room. Well, Mrs. Piddler what'll you have—I mean won't you have some tea? . . . Well, I can't understand why nobody wants my tea . . . Oh, how do you do, Mrs. Prance? . . . Do you know Mrs. Prance, Mrs. Fiddler? Now, you two ought to get together . . . What? . . . Oh, beg pardon, of course I mean Piddler . . .

("You know, Marge, I really oughtn't to do this—well set it there back of the cream pitcher . . . Say, do you know that Mabel Whittle's on her twenty-seventh sandwich? . . . Oh but I counted.)

"Oh yes indeed, Mrs. Hawsky, I'll be glad to serve you some tea. I'm simply sick the way everybody's going after the coffee right now. Will you take yours with gingerale? . . . Hot water? . . . Oh, I've got oceans of hot water . . . that is I did have . . . Now what on earth went with my hot water—oh, here it is! You know I think tea drinking is such a lovely old custom. It's simply too bad that in this machine age—All right, maybe that would be better. I know everybody likes to fix their own . . . Oh, Margie!

("Say, Marge, for the love of Mike bring me a cup of black coffee and a plate of sandwiches quick!")

Cook Cheese Slowly

Cheese dishes require slow cooking. Otherwise the cheese will become ropey and difficult to digest. Macaroni and cheese, cheese fondues and omelets all require a moderate oven. Toasted sandwiches should be cooked only until the cheese softens.

Mary Haworth's

Pushed Aside by Husband Engrossed in Hobby, Bride Is Despondent; Asks What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Shortly after marriage (we have been married 18 months and both of us are 30) my husband said that when he was younger he had greatly enjoyed the hobby of working on miniature models of ships, airplanes, trains, etc., and that he felt the yen to start this hobby again. I seconded the idea with enthusiasm and he started using part of the living room for his equipment. He began devoting several evenings a week to his hobby, but as his interest grew, he spent more and more time on it. Last summer he said he felt the need of a larger apartment affording an extra room as a workshop. So, after diligent search, we found one which answered the purpose. This apartment isn't so convenient or so pretty as the one we gave up, but I was willing to make the concession.

From then on, my troubles really started. He has enlarged his activities to include some chemical experiments, and reads far into the night on correspondence courses pertaining to same. He comes home and is glad to eat dinner I have prepared, but as soon as the meal is over, he goes immediately to his den and does not emerge until it is time to retire. He refuses to go out, and doesn't want to have any friends in, saying that he prefers spending his evenings as he does, and cannot think of anything he would rather do.

Once or twice he has promised he would go some certain place with me, but when the night for going arrives, he says he doesn't have time and won't go. It has gotten to the place where, if I ask him to help me with some household task, he either refuses pointblank, saying he doesn't have time, or does it (after urging on my part) in such a way as to discourage my ever asking him again. His salary is not sufficient to support me and I have continued my position, in order to clothe myself, pay half the household expenses, etc. He is very exacting about his food and considers it merely my duty to keep his clothes mended and in order. What started out as a 50-50 partnership has turned into an extremely one-sided bargain in his favor. His attitude is so selfish and inconsiderate that I can no longer tolerate it, but I do not know how to remedy the situation.

There are two sides to every question, and you may think I am not sufficiently entertaining to hold my husband's attention, but I do not believe this is true. I think, also, that my husband cares for me, in his way, and would be quite desperate and remorseful if he thought he were going to lose me. But as things stand, he seems to feel he has no obligation of any sort toward me. I do not feel it is my husband's duty to come home each evening prepared to entertain me, nor is it my desire to move in a "social whirl." But I see so many other married couples leading what seems to me a normal life, with a few social contacts, doing things together, enjoying each other's company at home, that I must reluctantly express a feeling of envy.

As it is, I spend some of my evenings reading and sewing or mending; I go to movies and sometimes to concerts, either alone or with a woman friend. I suppose I might take a course of some sort or try to in some way fill my life to the extent that I won't have time to think. But all these things are such poor substitutes for the companionship of my husband—and that is what I want. Can you help me?

AGNES G.

One Woman's Remedy

DEAR AGNES G.: The time has come to confront your husband with a plain statement of his exceeding selfishness, together with a firm demand for humane consideration. Since the marriage was launched on a 50-50 basis, on the theory that each was willing to carry half the financial load in return for the other's companionship, you have a right to insist that at least three evenings a week of your husband's time be devoted to partnership enterprises.

I know a woman who was confronted by just such a problem 15 years ago, when she was a bride of less than a year. Her husband's hobby was building so-called "home-made" radio sets, and, once the honeymoon was over, all his evenings, from the after-dinner hour until midnight, were spent in the basement of his home, in the congenial company of two or three men friends who shared his particular enthusiasm. For six months the bride kept a brave face, while shedding gallons of bitter tears in the privacy of her bedroom and in the lonely reaches of the deserted first-floor living quarters. She was a stranger in a new community; wouldn't, as she says, have known how to find her way to the nearest movie house, and wouldn't have dreamed of going out without her husband, anyway, and finally her sense of outrage reached the boiling point.

Her wrath exploded in a vehement demand that her husband show her more consideration. "There are seven nights in a week," she said. "One day a week, we have been taught, belongs to the Lord. We'll count that day out. That leaves us six. Hereafter, in the interests of fair play, I expect you to devote at least half that time—three evenings—to some sort of family life. I don't care whether we go out or whether we stay in; what we do or whom we see, but wherever we go, whatever we do, whomever we see, I expect us to spend those three evenings in each other's company. The others are yours to spend as you like. I promise not to question, complain or interfere." She had much more to say in the same vein, but it was hardly necessary. Her husband—who had never dreamed that she was suffering from a sense of neglect—was already virtually on his knees in horrified contrition, promising her all the attention she asked for and more. The situation righted itself immediately, and afterward the wife was often to wonder why she hadn't spoken her piece long before she did.

Of course it is perfectly possible that you might try such tactics on your husband and they would utterly fail of effect. It may be his neglect is more willful than thoughtless. In that case, supposing he loves you enough to wish to hold you, I think you will have to jolt him out of his take-you-for-granted attitude. This can only be done by getting yourself back into social circulation with a group of young-marrieds or office associates who gladly welcome you for your own agreeable qualities of wit, gaiety, good sportsmanship and infectious spirit of enthusiasm for partying. Let it become a matter of general knowledge among your friends that your husband is not to be divorced from his hobby for so much as an evening, a fact to which you have gracefully resigned yourself, and which leaves you footloose for such evening engagements as lectures, concerts, the theater, dining, dancing, etc.

If, as and when you begin to accept such invitations and to explain to your husband, with casual courtesy, that you are spending the evening with this man or that group, and will probably be home by such-and-such an hour—it is very likely that his hobby will begin to lose some of its overweening fascination for him; that he will begin to see good reason for spending more time with you. After the third such evening, if not the first, you will probably return home to find him walking the floor in a towering rage or in a nervous twitter, demanding an explanation of what this marriage is coming to and why.

However, if this approach likewise fails of effect, it may be necessary for you to take a matrimonial vacation, after quietly stating the reasons for so extreme a measure. You may need to remove yourself and personal effects to a lodging house or one-room apartment for a month or more in order to give him time and solitude in which to review his mistaken conduct in detail and arrive at some saving conclusion.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problem. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 22.

If you are getting the shakes and quivers in the little unlined coat number of the fall, the fact is brought home to you sharply that the winter coat question is one which must be faced immediately if you don't want the chronic sniffles. This week I have scouted the local field and am ready to report briefly on what the stores here bet we shall be wearing.

To begin, I never have seen fur-trimmed coats so comfortable in design. This is achieved by roomy armholes and wide sleeves—wide shoulders and soft backs—either loose box designs or wide and flaring skirts, if we want to step out with an imitation of a lady athlete.

And I needn't say that black is the hotsy-totsy of the coat departments. If the bankroll can go to it, there's nothing smarter or more beautiful than a dash of mink trimming. The old brown coat is not so prevalent, since modern imaginations take a longer chance with colors. Such as a gray coat with sheared beaver trimming, for instance. That's a daisy. Yes, the gray and beaver thing is a hot item, in several styles. Can't miss that baby.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I get a great, bitter laugh out of the printed attitude of some of our society commentators when they start weeping ink over the "death duties" paid by what they call our "new poor," meaning the poor devils who are down to their last rusty old tiara. "Confiscation" is the kindest word these easy-weepers apply to it. Anyone who thinks our beloved Nation has been helped by the enormous massing of wealth in a few hands should try sleeping under a bridge some rainy night. Heaven knows I'm no radical, but I can't coax a sigh over the new poor who can hardly scrape together a loose million these days.

'I Am Different' Opens National Holiday Week

Bankhead Is Star
Has 'Name' Cast
From the Hungarian

By Nelson B. Bell

"I AM DIFFERENT." Lee Shubert, in association with Joseph M. Gaites, presents the play in three acts and six scenes by Zoe Akins, adapted from the original of Lili Hatvany. Directed by Thomas Mitchell; settings by Kay Nielsen. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Lou ..... Hala Linda
Julia Tassi ..... Elizabeth Valentine
Cleo ..... Charlotte Cooper
Sari ..... Shirley Cooper
Dr. Thomas Held ..... Glenn Anders
Alex Toerson ..... John Emery

Otto ..... Thomas Louden
Thelma Bernd ..... Dorothy Adams
Dominko ..... Francesca Rotoli
"Provincial Penelope". Margaret Seddon

It is a distinctly Continental viewpoint and psychology that Zoe Akins brings to bear upon the enigma called love in "I Am Different," the three-act play she adapted from the Hungarian of Lili Hatvany for the starring purposes of Miss Tallulah Bankhead.

Presented for the first time in Washington in the National Theater last night, what presumably was a glossy drawing-room comedy-drama in its European setting seemed conspicuously out of the groove of thought and treatment most familiar to American audiences accustomed to contemplate the problems of matrimony across the footlights.

Jealousy forms the theme of three acts and six scenes that do not always sparkle with the polished brilliance they evidently were intended to reflect. Its chief protagonists are a famous actress, insanely in love with the handsome young country gentleman, with whom she has entertained a three-year infatuation; the feminine authoress of breezy books on "Sex relationship," her husband, a placid young doctor, and the household of a baroness, perturbed by the amatory inclinations of her growing children.

Another Week-end

The scene is the inevitable week-end house-party, with subsequent jaunts to the town houses of the principals and back again to the country. The action is initiated by the friendly shooting of her boy friend by the emotional actress, inspired by jealously of the young writer whom he has not, as yet, even met. The authoress arrives almost before the sound of the shot has died away and gives the over-wrought star with the miserable aim a quick lesson in the intricacies of coping with the idiosyncrasies of the opposite gender. She then proceeds to fall head over heels in love with the same young man herself.

The remainder of the play is devoted to demonstrating with some conclusiveness how married couples, with no sound reason for serious disagreement, never behave—well, hardly ever. The physician-husband has no cures whatever for his own matrimonial ills or the heart trouble of his wife. The gay young landowner, with the miraculous power over women, finds his only escape in the solace of continued philandering; the baroness' young son, who has married the foreign fortune-seeker, comes down with a cold and toward the end. Provincial Penelope drops by to give Judith Held, the author, a lesson, in turn, in what love of the male persuasion is all about. Out of it all evolves the fact that Judith is going to marry the Lothario of the shooting lodge, let her husband go hang and Jimmy and his scheming Lou do the best they can, Lou having learned from Judith that jealousy can be a very nasty weapon for the malefactor on the receiving end of its wrath.

This, I should say, is as nicely garbled a treatise upon the divine passion as any playgoer could wish to encounter. It moves in a dozen directions and follows none to a logical or convincing destination.

Star Has Herself a Time

It does, however, afford Miss Bankhead a sort of individual field day of pleasant and inconsequential playing in the pungent and provocative mood that she seems to enjoy most. It is an amusing, lusty and at times tender performance that Miss Bankhead gives in the role of the popular writer of advice to the lovelorn—advice that is perfectly dandy until she tries to take a considerable dose of it herself. She must be as acutely aware as her audience that there is nothing in her present vehicle in any way commensurate with her fine capabilities as an actress of deftness, authority and charm. The play would collapse completely without the vividness of her own personality to sustain it.

Two capable and proved leading men head the star's support, in the persons of John Emery and Glenn Anders. Mr. Emery is cast as Alex Toerson, the ardent sportsman, who takes love where he finds it; Mr. Anders as the put-upon husband, with a slight dash of Casper Milquetoast in his nature. Both frequently have proved themselves worthy of more substantial chores than they are called upon to perform here. The beloved star of her operetta days, Fritzi Scheff, appears in the role of the harassed baroness and portrays the part with characteristic spontaneity. Her welcome last night was second only to Miss Bankhead's.

Walter Holbrooke, Hala Linda, as the irrepressible Lou; Ara Gerald, Dorothy Adams, Francesca Rotoli and Washington's own Margaret Seddon, as Provincial Penelope, appearing only in the final scene, were the mainstays of the supporting cast.

The Weary Ones

With weariness of flesh, 'tis true,
There's weariness of spirit, too.
— Old Mother Nature.

The November sky was dull gray, heavy with clouds that all day long had hung over the Green Meadows and the Green Forest and far beyond with the threat of storm. There was a chill in the air that hinted of the approach of Jack Frost and rough Brother North Wind. All day Paddy the Beaver and Mrs. Paddy had worked with only brief periods of rest. Since building their dam across the Laughing Brook, and so making their pond deep in the Green Forest, they had been so seldom disturbed that they no longer felt the need of working only at night for safety. So often they worked by day as they were now doing.

"Jack Frost may arrive any time now. We must get the last of these logs down to the food pile before he makes ice to put a stop to our work," said Paddy as he pushed a log into the water and followed it to take it over to the great pile of sticks and short logs in the water near the big house he and Mrs. Paddy had built out in the water. The bark on those sticks and logs was the food on which they would live through the long winter.

"We don't really need them, for we already have more than enough to last us all winter, I feel sure," replied Mrs. Paddy. "But as long as we have cut them we may as well save them," she added.

"Of course," replied Paddy, "It would be thriftless of us not to, and nobody shall call us thriftless. Besides, it is better to have too much than too little, and one never knows what may happen before the ice goes in the spring and we can get a fresh supply of food. My dear, I really don't see how some of the thriftless ones, like Peter Rabbit and Jumper the Hare, manage to live through a hard winter."

Mrs. Paddy bit out the last chips from the log on which she was at work. She stopped to rest a minute before dragging it to the water. "We'll have to do a little plastering on the house before Jack Frost gets here. Do you think we better do it tonight?" said she.

Paddy shook his head. "It is chilly, but there won't be any freezing tonight," said he. "There is no use doing that plastering until we know that the mud will be frozen hard before there is a chance for it to dry out. You know that as well as I do."

"Listen!" exclaimed Mrs. Paddy. She sat up. Paddy also sat up. They could listen better that way, Anyway, they seemed to think so.

For a minute or two they heard nothing except the usual familiar sounds. "What did you think you heard?" asked Paddy.

Mrs. Paddy didn't like the way he said it. It suggested that she imagined that she heard something. "I didn't think I heard; I did hear!" she snapped. "There!"

This time Paddy heard. His small round ears twitched. On his face was a pleased look. He turned his head a little to one side to hear better. The sound was faint but unmistakable. It faded away completely for an instant. Then they heard it again, plainer than before.

"Honk, k'honk, k'honk, k'honk." There were many voices mingled.

"Honker the Goose and his flock!" cried Paddy. "I have wondered where they were. I had begun to wonder if they had gone South by another way or had passed at a distance."

"They are tired," said Mrs. Paddy. "They gabble that way only when they are tired. They must have flown a long way today."

So often they worked by day, as they were now doing

"Honk, k'honk, k'honk, k'honk, k'honk." The voices were louder now. Then Paddy and Mrs. Paddy saw against the dark clouds two black lines meeting in a point to form a V. They were somewhat wavering, those two lines. It seemed a long time before they were near enough for it to be seen that those two lines were made up of big birds flying one behind another, and their wings moved as if with difficulty. The sound of their voices grew to a clamor in which was a note of utter weariness.

"Honker is heading for our pond!" cried Paddy and started swimming toward the house in the water. Mrs. Paddy followed.

"Honk, honk, k'honk, k'honk, k'honk," cried the weary ones just above the tree tops.

Hospitals Back National Health Plans

Three Grops Approve Most of U. S. Institutions Some Reservations

Initiation of the proposed $850,000,000 national health program came another step closer yesterday when the "big three" hospital associations—American (undenominational), Protestant and Catholic—approved the plan with certain reservations.

The Rev. Alphonse M. Schwitalla, president of the Catholic Hospital Association and spokesman for the joint committee, announced the three groups' united stand following conferences with the Interdepartmental Committee on health and welfare activities, headed by Miss Josephine Roche.

Briefly, their position on the mammoth program, introduced here last July at the National Health Conference, is as follows:

Indorsement is given the plan to extend public health services and enlarge grants under the Social Security Act for the aid of mothers, babies and crippled children.

Extension of hospital facilities should be carefully considered, but new building should be launched only after local needs have been impartially surveyed and the need proved.

Additional beds for mental, tuberculosis and other types of specialized cases are necessary, but here again a study of local needs should precede hospital construction.

Hearty indorsement is given the Interdepartmental Committee's plan for compensation of the wage earner for time lost because of illness. However, the 16 members of the joint committee failed to reach unanimity on compulsory health insurance.

A. M. A. Virtually Approves

The American Medical Association has accepted virtually the entire program, with the exception of the health insurance proposal.

Excluding Federal, State and other tax-supported institutions, approximately 85 per cent of all hospital beds in the United States are in hospitals affiliated with one—and, in some instances, two—of the three associations. The A. H. A. alone has some 2,200 institutional members, the Catholic association 700 and the Protestant about 160.

The Interdepartmental Committee, sponsor of the July health conference, has now heard representatives of the American Medical Association, American Public Health Association and the organized hospitals, preparatory to drafting legislation for the coming session of Congress.

Private Initiative Backed

Wary against the introduction of any system which would submerge private, volunteer health agencies in governmental regulation, the hospital spokesmen reminded Miss Roche's committee of the gains which have been made under private initiative.

Budwesky Asks Larger Budget For Alexandria

Jumps of $128,374 Total Is $993,456.82 $302,819 for Schools

A budget calling for expenditure of $993,456.82—an increase of $128,374 over the budget last year—was proposed to the Alexandria City County last night by City Manager Carl Budwesky.

Budwesky estimated receipts for the calendar year 1939 at $1,020,623.34, which, under the proposed expenditures, would leave the city with a contingency fund of $27,166.52.

Chief item in the proposed budget, which faces many changes and revisions in an executive session of the council next week, is $302,819.67 for schools, an expenditure which does not include the school building fund, which is a bond issue item.

Budwesky asked council to spend $27,080.66 more on the city schools next year than last. The school budget calls for nine additional teachers and provides for the regular 5 per cent increase in salaries of present instructors. This item totals $10,608.87.

Another item in the school budget provides for replacing obsolete heating plants in schools at a cost of $4,940.

One change in the budget proposed by a council member last night would make allowance for the first time for depreciation of the city's fire-fighting equipment. The proposed budget contains for the first time establishment of a municipal garage and repair shops at a cost of $17,770.

Council, it was announced last night, has set December 20 as the deadline for payment of personal property tax bills.

Bailey, Policy Chief, Is Jailed For 6 Months

Guilty of Tax Evasion Also Fined $5,000 Operated Here

Carroll Bailey 35, of the 5400 block of North Capitol street, described by police as an "independent" numbers operator, was sentenced to six months in jail and fined $5,000 on income tax charges in Baltimore yesterday.

Federal Judge W. Calvin Chestnut announced the sentence after Bailey pleaded guilty. He will serve the sentence in Baltimore's city jail.

Judge Chesnut asked Defense Attorney Michael Freedman to explain why Bailey had understated his income. Freeman replied that Bailey was afraid to disclose the source of "his income in the numbers racket."

Bailey was arrested here last January when police raided an alleged gambling establishment in the 900 block of Second street northeast. Two months later the District grand jury indicted him and several others on a charge of conspiring to conduct a lottery.

Indicted in October

These charges were pending when the Treasury Department cracked down on Bailey for failure to pay some $12,000 in income taxes. He was indicted for this offense in October.

Internal Revenue Bureau agents accompanied Capt. George M. Little's vice squad in the raid that resulted in Bailey's arrest on gambling charges. At that time, Capt. Little said that Bailey's bank statements showed he had made deposits of more than $50,000 for the month of January. The Treasury men spent the next eight months working up their case against Bailey.

$88,000 in Year

In Baltimore, where the indictment was brought, the Government charged that Bailey had earned more than $88,000 between 1934 and 1937, but had paid less than $50 in income taxes. The amount he owed, it was contended, was $12,000.

Freedman told Judge Chestnut that his client had paid the Government $19,311.08—a figure representing the delinquent taxes claimed by the Government plus accrued penalties.

Assistant District Attorney G. Randolph Aiken told the court that Bailey paid the taxes and penalties on October 11 and at that time agreed to plead guilty to the Federal charges. Bailey, Aiken said, not only failed to report his true income in those years but failed to make any returns in 1927, 1928 and 1929, and in the years following paid only a total of $350 on an income reported at $30,000 "while his true income was close to $150,000" from 1927 to 1937.

If Bailey is unable to pay the $5,000 fine he must declare himself a pauper and serve 30 days more on his sentence.

U. S. Puts Income of Warrings at $238,000 For 3 Years; Defense Attacks Tax Expert

Warring

Leese said the three brothers' income really was $55,827, with taxes due of $4,764. And when he added to this $30,000 living expenses, $10,000 for each Warring, Leese made the income $85,827, with $10,616 due in taxes.

The 1936 partnership return showed $57,324 income on which the brothers paid $4,805 taxes. Leese made it $94,890 with taxes due of $12,377. Adding the living expenses he estimated—again $10,000 for each brother—the Treasury expert found that the brothers divided $124,890 and owed taxes for 1936 totaling $19,879.

Justice Laws overruled strong defense objections to Leese being allowed to add to the incomes what he thought the Warrings spent on living expenses. The lawyers—O'Connell and Harry T. Whelan for the Warrings, Rover for Gordon L. R. Sadur, tax consultant, and Former District Attorney Goldstein for Henry L. Scherr, Sadur's partner—indicated that they would return to court this morning fortified with legal arguments against leaving these figures before the jury.

The "dramatic art" with which District Attorney Pine played the role of a Warring and Wilson that of a Treasury agent in reading transcripts of questioning of the defendants Monday brought complaint from O'Connell yesterday. Justice Laws smiled, but told the prosecutors they must not do it any more. So Wilson read both parts of a long interview with Emmitt Warring, in which he explained that he met his heavy expenses by borrowing $30,000 from Eddie Killeen, gambler who was slain in 1935.

Cruiser Purchase Described

Albert B. Clark, of Silver Spring, told the court how he sold Emmitt Warring a 32-foot motor cruiser with "half-mile searchlight" for $4,475 in 1934. Aaron Shapiro, builder, of 1477 Girard street, testified Emmitt paid him $17,681 for a house at 3900 Macomb street in 1935 and 1936.

Attorney Alvin Newmyer established the record for this trial for short testimony. He took 58 seconds flat to be sworn, tell that Emmit paid him a $500 fee in 1935 and leave he stand without cross-examination. He was not asked what the fee was for.

Charles H. McNeill, a contractor, said in 1936 he got $3,450 for a cottage at Colonial Beach. George Coleman Ready, Warsaw, Pa., attorney, testified he sold the beach lot to Emmitt Warring for $1,600.

These witnesses and several who sold Emmitt automobiles all said the numbers operator paid cash.

YOUR WILL-POWER ...THE MODERN HAZARD TO YOUR NERVES

BEAGLE HOUND

English fox-hound in miniature. Solid and big for his inches, true beagle has the long-wearing look of the hound that can last in the chase. One of the oldest breeds in history—close to the original breed of hounds. U. S. standards specify 15 inches maximum height—any true hound color acceptable.

THE frazzling pace of these fast-moving times doesn't mean a thing in the life of the dog. Although his complex, high-keyed nervous system closely resembles our own, when the dog feels his nerves tire he settles down—relaxes—as the beagle hound above is doing. That is instinctive with the dog. We are not so likely to break nerve tension before it gets our nerves upset. We drive on. We worry. Ambition and determination push us on and on . . . past the warning stage of nerve strain. Will-power silences the instinct to pause and rest.

And yet jittery, ragged nerves are a distinct handicap. Don't let your nerves get that way. Learn to ease the strain occasionally. Let up—light up a Camel! It's such a pleasant, effective way to rest your nerves—a brief recess, mellow with the pleasure of Camel's mildness and ripe, rich taste. Yes, no wonder smokers say Camel's costlier tobaccos are so soothing to the nerves.

HE'S GIVING HIS NERVES A REST....

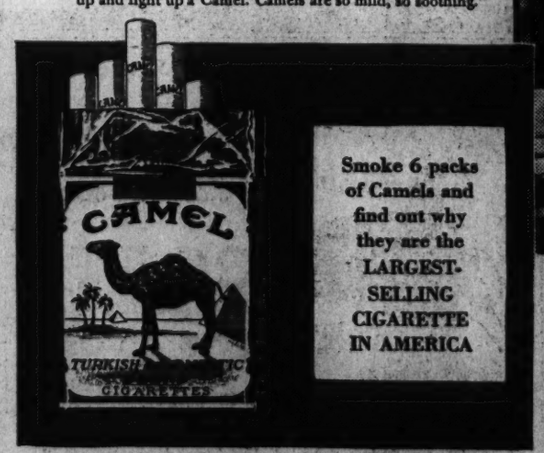
THEY'VE LEARNED—MILLIONS HAVE—TO GIVE NERVES RELIEF...THEY

"Let up—light up a Camel"

In the heart of the Congo, Leila Denis (right) and her explorer husband filmed Universal Pictures' epic, "Dark Rapture." Camels were an important item in Mrs. Denis' 42,000-mile trek. She says: "Such ventures can be quite nerve straining, but it's my rule to pause frequently. I let up and light up a Camel. Camels are so mild, so soothing."



Smoke 6 packs of Camels and find out why they are the LARGEST-SELLING CIGARETTE IN AMERICA

Covering trials, accidents, sports puts a big strain on the nerves of crack Western Union telegrapher, George Errickson (at right). "I avoid getting my nerves tense, wound up," says operator Errickson. "I ease off from time to time, to give my nerves welcome rests. I let up and light up a Camel."

DID YOU KNOW:

—that cigarette tobacco is dried for the market, or "cured" by several general methods, which include air-cured and flue-cured? Not all cigarettes can be made from the choicest tobacco, the fine top grades—there isn't enough of it available! Therefore it is important to know that Camel cigarettes are a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

THE COLONEL WORRIES.

"I never drink at noon," said the Colonel, "but today I'll have a little sherry before we eat."

"What's wrong? The doctors haven't found your liver missing?"

"Worse than that. I'm worried about our young Americans."

Gen. Ballard a hullaballoo

The Colonel gave me his best parade ground frown.

"You remember," he said, "when Gen. Bob Ballard caused such a hullaballoo by saying that one American soldier couldn't lick five foreign soldiers?"

"Yes, I remember; even if he's armed with two pitchforks."

"Well," he continued, "I'm beginning to wonder if one American soldier can lick two foreign soldiers."

"What's wrong? Is there an epidemic of athlete's foot?"

"No. But I think our boys are getting a little too—er—intellectual."

"—one American vs. five foes"

"Last week-end," he went on, "I drove up to see a football game at a college I attended before West Point. I noticed at game time that almost as many students were walking away from the field as toward it.

"My favorite professor told me lots of 'em prefer to spend Saturday afternoons with a good book or a good girl. They think football is stupid. If it weren't for the scholarship boys from the nearby high schools they wouldn't have enough men for a second team."

"Egad, this sounds serious."

"There's worse to come," said the Colonel. "The boys breed. They're introspective. They worry about their glands."

"They can't do that to us! America expects every man to do his duty, glands or no glands."

"This is no laughing matter," said the colonel, attacking a lamb chop. "Some of them take the pacifists more seriously than the pacifists take themselves. Quite a few of 'em think patriotism is a little vulgar."

"Oh, they're the ones who can't attract attention any other way."

"Many of them," said the Colonel, fixing me with a stern scrutiny, "think nobody loves 'em, because they can't see any jobs ahead. Also, their confidence is undermined. They worry about halitosis, about b.o., about their receding hair-lines, about hair in their nostrils. They worry about 5 o'clock shadow so much that they don't shave."

"—everybody yells at 'em"

"Some of the young scamps," the Colonel meditated aloud, with a piercing look at the blond at the next table, "hear the Government attacked so much that they think other governments are better. They hold ours in contempt, and expect nothing of it except that it take care of them."

"But the heart of young America is sound," I protested.

"It isn't their fault," he went on, not noticing the interruption. "Somebody is always yelling at them. Every day they hear enough doom and dismay to scare a cavalry sergeant. Why, they don't realize that a WPA worker in America lives better than a Krupp foreman in Germany."

. . . .

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"Gad, I wish I knew. What worries me is, what kind of soldiers would they make? I wish we could convince 'em again that each American is equal to any five foreign robots. Even if Gen. Bullard and I know it isn't true. A year in barracks wouldn't hurt these boys. They'd come out equal to one and a half Nasis, anyhow."

"Why, you old chauvinist! Have some pie a la mode?"

FPC Reports Decline in Va. Power Rates

237 Towns Get Cuts Lowest in Alexandria Also D. C. Suburbs

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Power Commission reported yesterday Virginia utility companies generally were displaying an inclination to reduce or "level off" their rates on residential and commercial electricity.

As a result, officials said, Virginia home owners and businessmen in a majority of the State's towns of 250 population or more were enjoying lower rates today than prior to January 1, 1937.

The survey disclosed reductions had been made on residential power rates during the calendar year 1937 in 237 of the 380 Virginia communities of 250 or more people.

In communities of between 10,000 and 50,000 populations, the commission found the $1.25 charge for 25 kilowatt hours at Alexandria to be the lowest, while Charlottesville, Newport News and Staunton charges of $1.78 were listed as highest. Virginia was also low, with its charge of $3.70 for 100 kilowatt hours, with Charlottesville, Newport News and Staunton again high, with charges of $5.42, were again high.

Arlington, Cherrydale and Clarendon, suburbs of Washington, D. C., with charges of $1.20 for 25 kilowatt hours, $3.79 for 100 kilowatt hours, and $7.59 for 250 kilowatt hours, were rated as lowest among communities of between 2,500 and 10,000 people, while Cape Charles, with charges of $2.93 for 25 kilowatt hours, $6.67 for 100 kilowatt hours and $11.17 for 250 kilowatt hours, was high.

A comparative study of residential rates disclosed the following changes in the period of the State's leading cities (January 1, 1935, 1937 and 1938 figures, respectively):

Alexandria—25 kwh. $2.13, $1.50, $1.20; 100 kwh. $4.40, $4.21, $3.79; 250 kwh. $9.39, $8.11, $7.59. Bristol—25 kwh. $1.90, 100 kwh. $4.70, $4.70, $4.70. $4.00; 250 kwh. $9.45, $8.00 $8.00. Charlottesville—25 kwh. $2.13, $1.96, $1.78; 100 kwh. $6.30, $6.03, $5.32; 250 kwh. $10.57, $10.03, $9.49.

Fredericksburg, Norfolk, Petersburg, Portsmouth, Richmond, Suffolk—25 kwh. $1.43, $1.39, $1.25; 100 kwh. $3.30, $4.43, $4.63; 250 kwh. $8.25, $7.65, $7.65. Harrisonburg—25 kwh. $1.85, $1.85, $1.85; 100 kwh. $4.20, $4.20, $4.20; 250 kwh. $8.70, $8.70, $8.70.

Strasburg—25 kwh. $1.90, $1.75, $1.63; 100 kwh. $5.08, $5.05, $5.00; 250 kwh. $8.38, $8.05, $8.05. Winchester—25 kwh. $1.90, $1.63, $1.50; 100 kwh. $5.08, $4.88, $4.80; 250 kwh. $8.38, $8.05, $8.05.

Some of the larger cities in which commercial rates were reduced during the calendar year, 1937, were Alexandria, Charlottesville, Covington, Fredericksburg, Newport News, Norfolk, Petersburg, Portsmouth, Staunton, Suffolk, Waynesboro and Winchester. They remained unchanged in Bristol, Danville, Harrisonburg, Lynchburg, Martinsville and Roanoke.

Baltimore Faces Slash in Budget

Baltimore, Nov. 22 (AP).—Mayor Howard Jackson said today anticipated decreases in revenues and necessity to appropriate $1,000,000 for direct relief would force curtailment of the city's 1939 budget.

He said the curtailment might force abolishment of approximately 100 jobs of engineers, draftsmen and inspectors because of lack of funds for improvements.

Revenue prospects, he said, as approximately $1,000,000 behind last year.

Overtime Work Helps to Raise Md. Pay Rolls

3% Boost in Month Is Contra-Seasonal Production Heavier

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 22.—Increased production and overtime were credited by the State labor department today with boosting pay rolls in Maryland more than 3 per cent last month.

Although employment levels showed little change compared with September figures, the pay roll increases were reported by the department as contrary to the average seasonal changes noted during the last 15 years.

The average fluctuation is a decrease of about half of 1 per cent in weekly pay rolls and a decrease of three-tenths of 1 per cent in employment, the department pointed out.

Reports from 642 manufacturing establishments in the State sat total employment last month at 87,262 persons, whose combined weekly earnings were $2,000,416. Of the 43 industries covered, 22 reported increases in both pay and jobs.

Face Changes, Roper Urges Va. Educators

New Problems Cited Research Needed School Heads Meet

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 22.—Daniel C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, told the Virginia Superintendents Association tonight that the "greatest bulwark" of successful democracy "is a functioning educational system that can look the problems of society in the face and resolves them through the X-ray of research."

Secretary Roper said, "We need a new kind of education for a new kind of civilization."

The problems that confuse society, create unemployment, prompt international conflicts, economic distress and social erosion, he described as sores on the body politic "which the coming generations must be better prepared to diagnose if they would know better how to contribute to their solution."

After emphasizing the importance of adequate facilities for education, the speaker added a word for "adequate" teacher salaries.

"It is a short-sighted policy," he said, "that makes more liberal financial provision for physical plant facilities than for those who are to operate the human laboratory. It is foolish to build structures to house occupants or teachers not as carefully selected and equipped as the building themselves. While adequate compensation is being gradually recognized by administrative authorities and the public, there is yet much progress to be made."

The superintendents met tonight in advance of the opening of the annual four-day convention of the Virginia Education Association. Directors of the organization at a session this morning formulated resolutions to be presented to the association during the convention.

One resolution reaffirmed the association's support of the three-point program for Virginia, calling for a minimum nine months school term and a minimum annual salary of $720 for teachers, an actuarially sound retirement system for teachers and free text books.

Another resolution urged Federal equalization of public school opportunities among the States.

Murder Indictments Asked In Train Death of Child-Wife

Hancock Group Claims Body Placed on Tracks Investigator Asserts Clews Indicate Suicide Grand Jury Weighs Evidence in 'Closed' Case

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 22.—Fifteen Hancock residents appeared late today before the grand jury to ask indictments in the death of Mrs. Helen Childers Burton, 16, whose body was found on a railroad track.

Deputy Sheriff Leister Isanogle, asserting an investigation showed "there was nothing to their story," said the group told him three women and two men had thrown Mrs. Burton from an automobile and later placed her body on the track.

He said the Hancock residents reported she went riding the night before her body was found and was thrown from the automobile near Berkeley Springs, W. Va., after a quarrel.

Mrs. Burton was married at the age of 14 to Peter Burton, of Oldtown, but they separated a year ago, Justice Edgar Cornelius, of Hancock, acting coroner, said. Since then she had lived with her parents in Hancock near where her body was found Thursday morning.

A coroner's jury deliberated three hours but deadlocked on a verdict Thursday night. Later, Justice Cornelius held her death was accidental and closed the case.

Isanogle, although expressing skepticism at the story carried to the grand jury, said he was convinced death was not accidental.

He said railroad experts told him that if she were struck accidentally her body would have been dragged a considerable distance. He said markings indicated the body remained in the same position after the train crushed her skull.

"I'm more inclined to believe it's a case of suicide," the deputy said.

To bolster his theory, Isanogle pointed to testimony given at the inquest by Evelyn and Matrona Karns, of Berkeley Springs. They quoted her as saying she intended to commit suicide and that she complained of "troubles."

Another possible clew to her death was discarded today by Isanogle. He said an iron bar clotted with hair was found about a quarter mile from the body in West Virginia. Examination, he said, revealed the strands of hair did not match those of Mrs. Burton.

The young girl was buried yesterday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 22.—The Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co., St. Louis, and the Milwaukee Co., Milwaukee, have been awarded the Charlottesville school improvement bonds for $339,735, with a joint bid of $340,710. The two bidders submitted an interest rate of 2¼ per cent. The bid, approved by the finance committee of the city council, carries with it a premium of $975.

The interest rate accepted, one of the lowest ever placed on bonds sold in Virginia, will mean a net saving of $15,000 to the city.

Three hundred and forty bonds were issued to provide funds for the erection of the $500,000 white high school and for a $100,000 addition to the colored high school. Both projects are partly financed by a PWA grant. The bonds are expected to further increase a steadily rising tax rate, which was $1.85 in 1934; $1.90 in 1935; $1.90 in 1936, and $2 in 1937. The council is legally obligated to provide for the payment of the bonds and interest by annual tax levy on all taxable property.

261 Fires Despoil 2,363 Acres of Md. Timberland

Baltimore, Nov. 22 (AP).—Maryland's timberland was swept by approximately 261 forest fires between midsummer and November 15, State forestry department officials reported today.

A survey of damage reported so far this year showed the blazes, in widely separated areas, burned over 2,363 acres, with more than half of the total acreage destroyed centered in Garrett County.

Statistics of 1938 fires showed 61 reported from Garrett, causing damage to 1,325 acres of timberland. Allegany and western Washington counties listed 81 fires but only 450 acres burned.

Anne Arundel, Howard, Montgomery and Prince Georges, in the central section of the State, had 58 blazes covering 159 acres, while only six were reported from the Blue Ridge area around Frederick and eastern Washington counties.

Anti-Nazi Wins Fight Against Return to Reich

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 22.—Paul List, anti-Nazi German, who has an American wife and a 3-year-old child in Rochester, won a year-long fight yesterday against deportation to Germany, where he probably would have faced long imprisonment or the executioner's block.

Although he has been twice deported from New York for illegal entry, List will be allowed to go "voluntarily" to some country other than Germany and return here under the German quota. He is expected to sail next week for Cuba.

Because List drove an ambulance in the International Brigade in the Spanish civil war, friends who espoused his cause felt confident he would be punished if sent back to Germany.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—The first of six sites for as many radio stations of the Virginia police communications system, has been purchased at Culpeper, it was made known today by R. P. Bishop, administrative assistant to the State director of motor vehicles.

The tract of 11 acres is located within three miles of Culpeper.

Bishop said negotiations also were being carried on for a site within three miles of Richmond for another station, which will serve as headquarters of the teletype-and-radio system.

Plans for the system call for other stations at or near Lexington, Appomattox, Wise and Wytheville.

The teletype system will work in conjunction with municipal and police radio stations at Alexandria, Culpeper, Richmond, Petersburg, Norfolk, Appomattox, Lynchburg, Danville, Roanoke and Bristol.

The first performance last night was well received by an audience which included Miss Fay Wray, the motion picture and stage star, who is visiting near Charlottesville. The play will be given again tonight and tomorrow night.

Leakage Caused Fatal Gas Blast

Harrisonburg, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—Gas, flowing out of an opening left by the removal of restaurant appliances, caused the explosion which killed one man and injured 15 others and wrecked a two-story building here Saturday night.

The facts were established today by Coroner F. L. Byers after his inquisition into the death of John Beach, who was trapped in the debris and died of suffocation. One of the two still in the hospital is Sam Stover, 72, operator of the two-table poolroom.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 22.—The John Powell "silver jubilee" recital which the famed Virginia pianist and composer will give at the University of Virginia on the evening of Friday, December 2, will duplicate the piano recital he gave at Carnegie Hall in New York earlier this month, which was a celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his American debut.

A student concert committee has been formed to sponsor Mr. Powell's appearance here, with Ernest Mead and William Moore, both of Richmond, as co-chairmen, and Thomas P. Bryan, jr., of Richmond, and Kenneth Giniger, of New York City, as vice chairmen.

Mr. Powell, who was graduated from the University of Vriginia in 1901, has made his home on his farm, Longways, in Albemarle County, near Charlottesville, since he moved from Richmond several years ago. He has been spending much of his time in musical composition.

The concert Mr. Powell played in New York was for the purpose of purchasing letters by Thomas Jefferson for presentation to the university library. His concert here next week will be to aid in the establishment of a fund to endow a student concert series.

Announcement that another dividend, amounting to 12 per cent, would be paid at this time was made in Charleston last week by State Banking Commissioner G. S. Ward. The checks are prepared by the FDIC in Washington and mailed to Alfriend's office here for distribution. With the earlier dividend the total distribution so far will amount to 67 per cent.

All depositors having $5,000 or less in the bank when it closed in August, 1937, were immediately paid in full by the FDIC.

Sanders, jr., for that of a friend, and thought he would remove six grapefruit from a luggage carrier as a joke.

Undulant Fever Cases Reported Near Md. Record

Baltimore, Nov. 22 (AP).—Undulant fever, the strange malady contracted by humans from the milk of infected cattle, is approaching record incidence in Maryland, State health department figures showed today.

Dr. C. E. Halliday, department epidemiologist, disclosed cases reported so far this year already have equaled the record of 45 cases set in 1932, with medical science still attempting to find a certain cure for a disease which lingers sometimes as long as three years.

Difficult to diagnose, because its symptoms are similar to those of typhoid and other fevers, presence of undulant fever can only be determined by laboratory tests. Often, it is confused in early stages with grippe or rheumatism.

Since 1927, 330 cases of undulant fever have been reported in Maryland chiefly from Allegany, Baltimore, Frederick, Harford, Montgomery, Talbot and Washington counties.

'High Hat' Bankers Decried at Luray

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., Nov. 22.—No longer can a banker be "high hat" in his attitude to the public, it was emphasized last night at a business meeting here of 200 northern Virginia bankers, representing Zone C of the Virginia Bankers' Association.

Defining the changing attitude, R. W. Nuckols, chairman of the public relations committee of the State group, stated that to be successful the banker must please his customer just as any other business must to get the public's good will.

Other speakers included J. Hammond Sifor, jr., of Morgantown, W. Va., a member of the Federal Reserve System, who sketched the history of the American Institute of Banking. Houston Newman, of Edinburg, presided and Mayor A. L. Bolleck made the address of welcome.

To Whom It May Concern:

Five dollars will get you nine at the current odds if you think Navy will beat Army at Philadelphia on Saturday . . . Army holds a victory over Princeton which tied Navy which beat Columbia which licked Army . . . Army-Navy battles have not been good football games, as the critics view them . . . because of the tendency of the team that gets a lead to go immediately on the denfensive . . . Gen. Hugh Johnson has termed both the Army and Navy teams" a disgrace to America's National defense." . . . and is in favor of firing the officers who coach the squads and hiring professional football coaches . . . he doesn't understand why Army and Navy, with more rigorous physical entrance examinations than any college in the land, do not produce the best teams.

POVICH.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt is grooming the colt Heelfly, which he purchased six months ago for the 100,000 Santa Anita Handicap . . . Heelfly's proudest feat was his dead heat with Seabiscuit last year at Laurel . . . Young Vanderbilt has already expended more than $100,000 in his attempts to win the Santa Anita . . . The Maryland Racing Commission, which last year voted Maryland tracks 1 per cent more "take" from the mutuels in order that they might improve conditions at the track, is insisting that totalizators be installed . . . under pain of cutting down the tracks' percentage . . . as an inducement to horse owners, the Oriental Park track at Havana has purchased $10,000 worth of oats which they will sell the owners at cost.

Gene Sarazen, who described golf pros as saps for playing for meager purses, can find no solace in the fact that winter tournaments offer $80,000 in prize money . . . the big winner among the 100 pros who will compete on the winter circuit, is not apt to net more than $10,000 . . . yet Don Budge, the tennis big shot, signed the other day for $75,000 in exchange for his services for one year . . . Sammy Snead, the biggest pro golf money winner of 1938, earned $18,000 . . . the pocket billiards champion annually makes more than that in a year, and most any fourth-rate heavyweight can earn twice as much . . . the all-time high in sports earnings was the $990,000 Gene Tunney received for 30 minutes of boxing one September evening in 1927, against Dempsey at Chicago.

The two best football players the Redskins have encountered this season are Whizzer White and Ace Parker . . . they agree on that, unanimously . . . the New York Giants, who must meet the Brooklyn Dodgers before they play the Redskins on December 4, anticipate an easy time with the Brooklyn club . . . which received a terrific battering from the Chicago Bears last Sunday . . . Sammy Baugh was not in on the plot when the Redskins decided to give the Richmond Arrows a touchdown in the last quarter of their exhibition game at Richmond Sunday . . . Baugh chased a Richmond ball carrier for 60 yards before hauling him down on the 4-yard line . . . only to discover that he wasn't supposed to make the tackle . . . two minutes later Baugh atoned for his mistake by pitching a perfect pass to the Richmond safety man and letting him run to a touchdown.

Dazzy Vance Appears On Road to Recovery

Clearwater, Fla., Nov. 22 (AP).—Dazzy Vance, former big league pitcher, appeared to be winning his duel with death today. Dr. L. B. Dickerson said the 46-year-old former speedball king, who is suffering from lobar pneumonia, had a good day Monday although he still was seriously ill.

Vance has been given intravenous injections and oxygen inhalation. The treatment has been reduced gradually as his condition improved.

Sportsmen Band to Get Stadium

Big Drive Planned To Be Civic Affair Schools Back Plan Foster Heads Group

A concerted drive for civic action to obtain a national coliseum for Washington was launched yesterday at a luncheon of prominent sportsmen and business leaders at the University Club.

Pointing to the stadii erected in Philadelphia, Chicago, Baltimore and cities smaller than Washington, Israel W. Foster, commissioner of the Court of Claims and chairman of the meeting, sounded the keynote of the drive when he said the coliseum would pay for itself over a period of years and would boom business in the city.

Mr. Foster described in detail the financial arrangements for building Ohio State University's stadium, funds for which were contributed by public-spirited persons. He pointed out that the stadium not only was a profitable venture in itself, enabling the university to add more units for its students, but swelled the volume of business in the city considerably.

Not All Sports

The group agreed that Washington does not want a coliseum devoted exclusively to sports, but one that will be suitable for conventions, forums, musical convocations and even Presidential inaugurations. With this in mind, the presidents of Georgetown, George Washington and American universities heartily indorsed the project. More than 50 civic and fraternal organizations also are on record as favoring the erection of a coliseum.

Foster, who will be absent from Washington during the next month on business, appointed J. Leighton Cornwell, an attorney with the Department of Justice, chairman in

Gordon Leads Indians To 13-7 Upset of Tech

Fleet Back Sets Up 1st Touchdown, Scores 2d Romps 55 Yards With Intercepted Pass in 4th Tech Muffs Several Promising Scoring Chances

The flying heels of Robert "Flash" Gordon, Anacostia halfback, trampled McKinley High's defense into the dirt of Tech Stadium yesterday, to give the first year Indians their second victory of the season and drop Tech's second place hopefuls into a deadlock with Western for the runner-up spot. The score was 13-7. A meager gathering of 400 watched the biggest upset of the 1938 inter-high series.

It was Gordon, recently returned to the line-up after missing two games because of a fractured leg, who set up the touchdown which tied Tech in the third quarter, and it was the same flashy ball carrier who romped 55 yards with an intercepted pass in the fourth period to give the Anacostians the winning touchdown.

Half-Time Score Is 0-0

The Indians rejoiced in a 0-0 deadlock at half time, but Tech seemed dissatisfied with the count. Tech's Paul Dean, halfback, took his first chance in the third quarter to get the ball within scoring distance, running back Art Faircloth's kick from his own 20 to Anacostia's 5. The 75-yard broken-field run was easily the longest and one of the most brilliant of the game. Three plays later Dean plunged over for the opening score of the game. Harold Berry's conversion was good.

The boys from the Anacostia flats took the kick-off then and set about a scoring effort of their own. A line play and a pass gained nothing, and Gordon took the ball on his own 41, tore away from three potential tacklers, and went without blocking to Tech's 16. Johnny Gilmore finally bringing him down. It was a 43-yard gain and after George Dyer had added a first down on Tech's 5, Faircloth took Perry Seaman's lateral over left end for the score. Faircloth nonchalantly flipped the tying point to Otis Scott over the goal.

The remainder of the third period was played in Indian territory, with Tech threatening. One almost sure touchdown for Tech was averted when Don Cochrille, Tech sub, fumbled the ball after a 20-yard gain and Anacostia recovered on its own 7.

Tech Muffs Chance

Again Tech had a scoring chance when Faircloth's attempted lateral on his own 16 was recovered by the Trainers. The threat faded, however, as the ball was lost on downs.

The break which, along with some excellent football, won the game for the Indians, came only about 30 seconds from the end of the game. Faircloth had been forced to kick out of danger, and Paul Dean returned the boot to midfield. Frank Swarr, substitute back, with Anacostians swarming over him, attempted to find a pass receiver on the next play. That receiver happened to be Gordon, and he went from his own 45 across the goal. At about the 30 stripe, Swarr attempted to stop him, but the speedy back stumbled out of his grasp and got away. A drop kick by Faircloth for the extra point was low.

The first two quarters of the game were marked by an early and unexpected rush of the Anacostians from their own 17 to Tech's 39. This was accomplished in a series of 11 plays, which picked up 3 first

Attacks Critics Keeps Purity Code Ex-Athletes Angry Coach Is Quiet

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 22.—A long-smouldering controversy over football at Pitt broke wide open today, with Chancellor John G. Bowman assailing interference "from unofficial managers who wants to sit in the press box."

Bowman's outburst preceded by an hour a charge by Pitt's Varsity Letter Club, comprising 900 former athletes, that he had rejected a proposal for an "impartial" investigation of athletic affairs.

The chancellor, in one of his infrequent addresses to a student assembly, turned suddenly from generalities to a hot blast at critics of the Bowman "code" which put Pitt athletics on a "strictly amateur basis" a year ago.

His speech apparently was provoked by the student newspaper's demand for an explanation of the athletic situation and reports of a threatened strike of freshmen football players. The freshmen complained they were being "dunned" for payment of tuition notes, which they claimed they signed as a formality.

Hits at Foes

Angrily, Bowman denied that he was unsympathetic to football or unfriendly to Coach Jock Sutherland, pledged continuance of the "code" and blamed athletic troubles on "unofficial managers" inside and outside the university. He added:

"Only half an hour ago I received a threat, and I have received numerous others, telling me that I must back down in my stand on Pitt's athletic policy or take the consequences."

"Clean It Up!"

Dr. Norman C. Ochsenhirt, head of the letter club, disclosed that he called Bowman shortly before the speech. Ochsenhirt declared Bowman refused the suggestion for an investigation and declined action upon a memorandum handed him by club representatives on November 17.

The memorandum charged Pitt's athletic affairs were in "a terrible muddle," laid the blame on inefficient management, and appealed to Bowman "for God's sake take hold of this mess and clean it up. Set our athletic house in order."

The memorandum said there was evidence the university had "broken faith" with the freshmen, and offered to "frunish capable advice for the freshmen in order that they may be fairly represented."

Pitt's "dream" backfield and veteran line has dropped only one game this season and ranks with the ten best in the country, but Sutherland frequently has groaned over the prospects of fashioning a team in 1939. Reserves, he said, were weak and the second team's appearances this fall bore out his complaint. The freshmen, however, won three of four games.

Pitt ends the regular season against Duke on Saturday. Sutherland, who frequently denied reports that he was resigning, did not comment on Bowman's speech.

Maniaci to Be Fullback

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Owner-Coach George Halas of the Chicago Bears has decided to make his star right halfback, Joe Maniaci, into a fullback next season. Maniaci, a former Fordham star, is the best power runner the Bears have come up with since Bronko Nagurski retired.

St. Alban's B Team Beats Friends, 7-6

New Six-Man Football Given Inaugural Here St. Albans Scores in Last Period to Win Wannon and Hannon Are Stars of New Contest

A new style football game, utilizing six men on a team, was staged for the first time in Washington yesterday as St. Albans' "B" club won a 7-to-6 victory over Friends Prep on the latter's field.

Operating with three men on the line and same number in the backfield, the Albans team, after trailing, 6 to 0 for three periods, opened with a burst of power early in the fourth period that virtually snatched victory from the hands of their tiring foe.

Bill Hannon, standing in midfield, whipped a 20-yard pass to Hare, fleet Alban end, who galloped to the Friends' 5-yard line. Then, after Grayson had foundered on an end run, Hannon again unloosed a pass to Hare that accounted for the touchdown. The winning point was added by Hannon on a line plunge.

The Friends' score came in the second period, when John Fergus, Friends back, intercepted an enemy pass in midfield and carried it to the Alban 35-yard line. Clift Wannon shot a 20-yard pass to Lewis Newmeyer, Friends end, and Wannon carried the ball into touchdown lane.

The new type of football play was originated about five years ago in Chester, Nebr., by Stephen Epler, former coach of Chester High School and currently a member of the faculty of the Columbia Teachers College in New York. It was invented for small schools, which, because of the lack of either good grid players or because of insufficient financial backing, were unable to present full teams with the proper equipment.

In 1936 Mr. Epler, with the approval of the Nebraska athletic commission, thoroughly organized the game and wrote a book of rules to take care of the irregular procedure of play. The following rules, listed below, are the major differences between this game and the regular high school game:

1. The size of the field is 40 yards by 80.
2. A team must make 15 yards for a first down.
3. A field goal counts 4 points and a kicked extra point is worth 2 points, while a rush or pass for the added score is only 1 point.
4. A pass can be thrown from anywhere behind the line of scrimmage.
5. A pass, either lateral or forward, must be thrown before the ball can be advanced by running.

Tom Lieb Quits Job As Coach at Loyola

Los Angeles, Nov. 22 (AP).—Tom Lieb, for nine years head football coach at Loyola University, resigned today amid mounting criticism by Loyola alumni over the team's poor season.

Lieb, who came to Loyola from Notre Dame, where he played football and was assistant coach under Knute Rockne, said he would leave when his contract expires next March 1.

Loyola has los five games and won three this season.

Dr. Ballou Spikes Central-St. John's Game

A decidedly unfavorable decision on the proposed grid clash of St. John's Prep and Central High was reached at a meeting of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of public schools, with members of Central's faculty and coaching staff.

Dr. Ballou issued a statement that "the superintendent does not believe that the rules (governing an eight-game schedule for the high schools) can or should be set aside by him, but suspension of the rules should be recommended by the high school principals, approved by the officers concerned, and finally approved by the board in the same manner that the original rules were approved."

Final decision on whether the game, proposed for the high school and prep school championship of the District, will be played was therefore left to the Board of High School Principals. And the fact that the regular meeting of the board does not occur until the 15th of December, left little hope that the game will be played.

The proposal laid before Dr. Ballou by officials of Central, suggested that the game be played on December 2. This would make it a post-season game, due to the limitation of the high school season to November 30 by the recently inaugurated rules of Birch E. Bayh, head of health and physical education. The rules give Dr. Ballou the authority to extend the season, but according to another rule, only the Board of High School Principals is authorized to increase the eight-game limit.

The possibility of an informal poll of the board by Dr. Ballou, sometimes done on short notice, was not considered as the superintendent indicated he had received objections to the game from one of the board members. If a controversy was to be encountered, Dr. Ballou felt that the board should act on the suggestion in regular session.

The proposed St. John's-Central clash, therefore, a virtual impossibility, Bayh suggested that a clause be added to the rules allowing the inter-high victor to play one post-season game. This, he said, would do away with the necessity of a school's cutting down on its regular schedule to play a championship game of this sort.

Late last night Mr. Bayh said that the refusal of Dr. Ballou to sanction the game was perhaps as well, after all. St. John's loss to Western at Western Stadium yesterday removed it from the ranks of the undefeated, and as Western finished behind Central in the inter-high series, Mr. Bayh said that the game between St. John's and Central would doubtless draw very poorly at the gate.

Red Raiders Victory Led By Iglesias

Runs 24 Yds. to Tally Teams Well Matched Johnnies Count in 3d 2,000 See Game

St. John's hopes for its first perfect campaign and subsequent post-season game offers were blasted yesterday as a lowly regarded Western eleven arose like a spectre from the remnants of a mediocre season to upset the Johnnies, 13 to 6, at Western Stadium.

Before some 2,000 fans the Johnnies were eliminated as the city's lone undefeated, untied scholastic team by the alert Red Raiders who, although outplayed, won a clean-cut victory.

Led by Eddie Iglesias, junior back of Western, the Raiders scored in the second and third periods, the first touchdown on a pass from George Barnes to Frank Fields to the 11-yard line which was good for a gain of 30 yards, from where Stone took it over, and the second touchdown a 24-yard run by Iglesias off right tackle.

St. John's scored in the third period when Gallagher grabbed Frank Cady's pass on the Western 27-yard line and went over standing up.

Battle Even in Opener

In the first period the teams battled on even terms. Cady and Mulvihill made short gains for St. John's, with Iglesias and Barnes doing most of the running for Western. The period ended with Western in possession of the ball on their own 45-yard.

With Stone and Barnes carrying the ball, the Raiders advanced to the 35, from where Barnes passed to Fields, and Fred Stone went around his right end to pay dirt. O'Hanlon converted, making it Western, 7; St. John's, 0. St. John's march down the field after the kick-off was short-lived as Frank Cady fumbled and George Chamberlain recovered for Western.

St. John's came back in the third period and again marched down the field to the Western 7-yard line where the Westerners held and St. John's lost the ball on downs. Tommy O'Hanlon broke through twice to smear the Johnnies' plays when they were in scoring position. Barnes kicked out of bounds for Western on their own 43, and on St. John's first play, Cady passed to Gallagher on the 27, and Gallagher romped over for the Johnnies' score. Turk Daly's placement was blocked by Joe Viehman.

Place-Kick Blocked

Hilleary, a Western reserve player, returned St. John's kick-off to the Johnnies' 47-yard line. Western picked up 23 yards on two passes from Barnes to Fields, and then Iglesias went through right tackle for 24 yards and a touchdown. O'Hanlon's placement for the extra point was blocked, making it 13 to 6.

St. John's returned the ball to their own 40, and Cady passed to Joe Daly on the first play for a first down. Again Cady passed, this time to Gallagher which was also good for another first down. St. John's failed on two running plays as Western's O'Hanlon broke through to stop Williams and Mulvihill. A St. John's pass was then intercepted by Snow and Western proceeded to march down the field with Eddie Iglesias carrying the ball. Iglesias carried the ball on four straight plays making 34 yards, and the game ended shortly afterward.

The defeat marked the first for St. John's this season. Western played inspired football throughout, and the play of Iglesias, a second string back up until the game, was outstanding. Western finished third in the interhigh series behind central and Tech.

Strictly Amateur Athletic Policy to Be Applied at Pitt

Pittsburgh, Nov. 22 (AP).—Chancellor John G. Bowman served notice today Pitt would not abandon its Bowman "code" adopted in 1937—which put athletics on a "strictly amateur basis."

Speaking to nearly 5,000 students and department representatives, the chancellor replied to what he termed veiled threats and to pressure of "unofficial managers." He told the assembly he wanted "the rules by which the whole game is played to be obeyed."

He denied what he said were accusations that he was against football and asserted Coach Jock Sutherland had his good will.

The chancellor said complaints of freshmen football players that they were asked to pay tuition notes which they believed were formalities were being investigated. He said he was convinced the freshmen were not misinformed regarding conditions under which they entered school.

Best Passer Is Helpless Unless Given Smart Protection While Tossing—Baugh

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh

Forward Passing Champion National Football League.

SAMMY BAUGH.

The best forward passer in the world is helpless unless he gets smart protection back there while he is getting his throws away. And when I say smart protection, I mean just that. Two capable men back there blocking for the passer are better than four men who don't know how to do the job.

As far as I am concerned it is no great mystery to me that little Davey O'Brien has had such great success with his passing for Texas Christian University. Because I believe that Coach Dutch Meyers designs better protection for his passers than any other college coach in the country.

When I was throwing 'em for T. C. U., I had marvelous blocking back there. I probably had more time to look over the field for receivers than any other passer in the country. And O'Brien undoubtedly is operating with the same kind of pass protection.

I do not mean to detract from little Davey's skill as a passer. By this time there ought to be no doubt of that. Twenty-nine completed passes in his last two games speak for themselves. But he apparently is getting the same grand help that I am.

Down at T. C. U. Coach Meyers always called our pass protection the "man-on-man" blocking. When the opposition was foolish enough to play a five-man line against us, it is easy to understand how we could pull men out of the line to block for the passer. And when they played a six-man line, we could pull two guards out to block. No team dared to play a seven-man line against us.

With the Redskins I usually have one less man blocking for me on my passes than I had in college, but there is compensation in that because it means that I have one more eligible man down the field.

I have discovered in the pro league, though, that the smart passer is the one who fades directly to the rear instead of running diagonally before he throws his pass. On those diagonal runs, he is at the mercy of any man who breaks through, while if he has simply faded to the rear he can escape a rusher by stepping forward.

The Philadelphia Eagles, for whom Dave Smukler throws effective passes, have one of the cleverest pass protection plays I have ever seen. Smuckler rarely takes more than a few steps backward and his blockers let two rushers through and then sideswipe 'em. That is mouse-trapping. Smuckler then steps forward again and usually has plenty of time to look over the field.

But getting back to Davey O'Brien, it is my prediction that he will be a tremendous star if he joins up with the pros after his graduation. Davey isn't much more than a 150-pounder and I know that little backfield men haven't done well with the pros. Cotton Warburton is probably the outstanding example of their failure. But O'Brien is, in fact, a big little man. He has big legs and big arms. And he isn't strictly a passer. He can hit the line with the drive of a 200-pounder. The pro team that comes up with him will have something.

75 Novices Are Entered In Golden Gloves Tourney

Annual Tournament Starts Tonight at Arena Mike Eslin Still Featured Among Beginners New Faces and Old Grace Amateur Ring Card

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Seventy-five novices will be inducted into the ancient and honorable knuckle fraternity tonight at Turner's Arena where the sixth annual Golden Gloves boxing tournament gets under way, and it is with more hope than skill, perhaps, that they fare forth.

Not all 75 will make their appearance tonight, but 32 youthful gladiators will manufacture 16 promising bouts, the first bell ringing at 8:15 o'clock.

The amateurs need none of the customary build-up to attract the customers, for every boy climbs through the ropes trained within an inch of his life and ready to slug until the last ounce of strength ebbs from his tired frame. They all seem to have unlimited courage, and as long as two youngsters are on their feet the audience can rest assured it will see enough fighting to satisfy its craving for action.

Tonight's activities inaugurate a five weeks' stand at the Arena, with the senior ringmen scheduled to begin their tournament next week. Matches will be held every Wednesday night, extending well into December.

New faces and old grace tonight's card, and among the latter is the friendly physiogomy of Mike (Whizzer) Eslin, kayo king from Fifth and K streets northeast, who once again seeks an elusive title in the 122-pound class. Michael is a trifle short on skill, but long on endurance and willingness, and this time vows he'll achieve his lifelong ambition to win a championship.

Eslin was the first to submit his entry blank when the tournament was announced this year, and the first in line for a physical examination last night at the Knights of Columbus gym. He has been the first to be eliminated in past tournaments, but armed with a four-leaf clover and lucky horseshoe is confident he'll gain the finals this time. The horseshoe, of course, will not be secreted in his glove, although it's an idea.

A partial list of aspirants to championships are Johnny Bell, Red Vernon, Eddie Stoneman, Bernie Daley, Phil Appel, George De Zerne, Clint Hord, Myrle Mercilliot, Hilton Rudd, Stanley Lee, Danny Pilkington, Billy Colbert, Victor Di Lisi, Bobby Hockenberry, Ray Yates, Leon Dodson, Freddy McNeil, Willie Sheehi, Frankie Caruso, Clyde Hayes, Howard Blafkin, Jimmy Murray, Alex Glendining, Arthur Weston, Ken Hoover, Nick Mancini, Johnny Mancini, Bobby Bolick, Edward Zurick, Jackie Fox, Angel Correa, Johnny Foster, Dick Claggett, Clarence Irwin, Basil Harris, Vincent Square and Garver Davis.

Buck O'Neil was named chairman of the press committee with the following members, Vicent X. Flaherty, Rod Thomas, Rockford Riley, Lewis F. Atchison, Arch McDonald, Gordon Hittenmark and Tony Wakeman.

Also in attendance yesterday were Jack Brown, Northeast Business Men's Association; Stanley Pearson, Junior Board of Commerce; Thomas W. Sandoz, Washington Real Estate Board; Theodore S. Four Terps Will End Grid Careers

2 Win Berths at G. W. Tonavitch at Fullback Seager to Be at Tackle Cards Prep for S. C.

By Jack Munhall.

George Washington and Maryland continued to present a study in contrast yesterday as they prepared for Thanksgiving Day games which will conclude their seasons. The Terps, still recuperating from their great showing against Georgetown, held only a light signal drill, designed to keep the players limber, and took a look at Washington and Lee formations.

The Colonials, however, were put through a long and hard practice at Griffith Stadium as Coach Bill Reinhart redoubled his efforts to instill a punch in his offense which failed to register a single first down against Bucknell. At the finish of the workout, Reinhart announced that there would be two new faces in the line-up that will tackle West Virginia in the Colonials' homecoming.

John Tonkavitch, bulky little fullback who was going so well when shelved by an ankle injury, is fit again and his recent excellent form has prompted Reinhart to give him a starting chance. Wilbur Saeger, a fast, 200-pound tackle, will be the second nowcomer to the line-up. The big junior has always shown plenty of potential ability but not until the Bucknell game did he play the kind of football expected of him.

These are the only changes Reinhart contemplates. Vic Sampson, halfback star, apparently is back in the good graces of his coach. The little triple-threater, who was a surprise starter against Bucknell and played all but about six minutes of the game, will be a left halfback. With Tonkavitch and Sampson in the backfield will be Frank Merka, at quarter back, and Murphy Booth at right halfback.

Four End Careers

Four players will be making their last appearances in Maryland uniforms Saturday when the Terps meet Washington and Lee's Generals at Baltimore tSadium. Quarterback Charlie Weidinger, one of the finest passers ever developed at College Park; Center Jim Forrester, Back Rip Hewitt and End Nick Budkoff will not be around for next football season.

Budkoff, the team's No. 1 end, is not expected to see action, although he may play a minute or so out of courtesy, as he did against Georgetown. Budkoff has been on the injured list for some time.

Maryland plans to start Saturday the same players who started against Georgetown. These men, most of whom played 60 minutes of the Georgetown game, are still somewhat tired and will be under a distinct handicap, for the Generals have not played since routing William and Mary, 27-0, on November 12.

Passes Expected

Two of the finest passing combinations in the South will be unveiled Saturday when South Carolina's Gamecocks meet Catholic University's homecoming Cardinals at Brookland Stadium.

In Ed Clary and Heber Stroud, throwers, and Al Grygo and Larry Craig, receivers, South Carolina has a pair of aerial teams that have been troublesome to every opponent. Against Fordham last week these air-minded young men clicked for two touchdowns, but both were nullified by penalties.

Despite three successive victories, Catholic University will be the underdog against the Gamecocks, who have compiled a creditable record in strong competition. "Dutch" Enright's boys have already played ten games, among them a 6-6 tie with undefeated Villanova. They dropped one-point decisions to Georgia and Wake Forest, lost to Clemson, 34-12 and to Fordham, 13-0.

Roanoke Loses End and Captain

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salem, Va., Nov. 22.—Disheartened somewhat by the loss of their cocaptain and potential all-Virginia wingman, Kenneth Moore, Roanoke College's Maroons ran Tornado plays this afternoon as they prepped for southwest Virginia's turkey day classic with King College in Bristol, Tenn.

Moore had his ankle knocked out of place in Saturday's mud-slinging contest with the V. M. I. Keydets, and although he played on it later in the game, soreness has increased in the joint and there is only an "outside chance" that he'll get to play against the Red and Blue.

Printer, in Army With Leavitt, Anxious to See 'Man Mountain'

Post Employe Recalls Him as Fair Grappler Ex-Soldier Wrestles Here Tomorrow

Twenty-three years after they soldiered together at Fort Slocum, New York, a Washington Post printer hopes to shake hands again with his old buddy, Frank Leavitt, alias Man Mountain Dean, who meets Hank Metheny, of Missouri, on tomorrow night's holiday wrestling card at the Arena.

Adolph Majower is the compositor's name, and as he recalled the war period last night while taking time out from his linotype machine, he also remembered Dean as a doughboy with a great love of rest. He was, it seems, doing a hundred things to get out of doing one task—but never with much success.

"That guy hated Army routine so much," Majower recalled, "he went out for every team at the post, football, basketball and baseball—and I think he boxed a little. If you played on a team you were excused from routine duty for practice and games.

"Finally he went to New York and took up wrestling to earn a few pesos on the side. I used to go down to watch him every week, and was he awful. He didn't know a half-Nelson from a handshake, but he was big and tough and afraid of nobody. He wrestled 'em all, Strangler Lewis, the Zbyszkos, Dr. Roller and all the rest. He usually lost, of course, but still it was a little extra dough, and all of us soldiers could use it.

"I lost track of Frank when we were mustered out of the service, then I picked up Westbrook Pegler's column one day a nswwadhy ler's column and saw where Man Mountain Dean and Frank Leavitt were the same fellow and running for a political office in Georgia. I wrote to him, but the letter was opened by mistake by another Leavitt, en route, and returned to me.

"Then he went to California, and I saw where he became a father, so I knew he wouldn't have time to be writing to old army buddies and didn't write again. Now, I understand, he's wrestling here Thursday night—do you think he'll show up for the match? They tell me he has improved considerably in 23 years. I suppose he had to to get to the top. By the way, there aren't any ducats around for that show, are there I'd like to see just how much he has improved."

Dean's match is the semifinal bout to the feature involving Joe Savoldi and the Golden Terror. Customers are warned to bring their own masks and chest protectors in the event the Terror decides to engage in a little impromptu scuffling before entering the ring. He was delayed 15 minutes the last time he showed here because of a fan nibbling at his ankles.

Variety will be supplied by Mae Meyer, the Minneapolis maid, who wrestles Dalton in a 30-minute preliminary. Other bouts listed include Jules Strongbow vs. Chief Chewaki and Pete Peterson vs. Frank Brown.

9 W. & L. Gridmen To End Careers

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lexington, Va., Nov. 22.—Although the Generals were billed as "a sophomore squad" this season, nine Washington and Lee seniors will make their gridiron exits in the game with the University of Maryland at Baltimore Stadium Thanksgiving Day.

College football players throughout the Nation will fade into obscurity within the next week, but on the W. and L. campus such names as Bill Brown, Joe Ochsie, Ray Craft, Don Dunlap, Charlie Lykes, Birnie Harper, Dorsey Wilson, Roy Hogan and Shack Parrish will not be isolated from athletic files.

All these men will finish their college careers Thursday.

Victory Post Winner In Indoor Baseball Loop

Victory Post of the American Legion made a clean sweep of the first half series in the Community Center Indoor Baseball League at Tech gym last night, trouncing the Treasury Department 5 to 0.

Harold Steffes pitched the best game seen in the three years of indoor competition when he held the money counters to one scratch hit, and infild bounder which Thornton beat to first. He walked one batter and struck out five.

Temple Jarrell and Joe Bartolini were the clutch hitters, poling the ball into the stands with two men on in each instance. Mandes had a busy night at third.

'Skins Drill For Pirates

Flaherty in Lecture Raps Over-Confidence Game Is Council One

Coach Ray Flaherty yesterday launched the Redskins' siege of practice for their battle on Sunday with the Pittsburgh Pirates by delivering a lecture aimed to destroy all traces of overconfidence.

Reminding the Redskins that the were barely able to beat the Pirates, 7 to 0, three weeks ago, Flaherty added:

"You fellows haven't played a good football game ina month. You don't have anything to be overconfident about. That beating you took from the Bears ought to prove that. On Sunday, I want your best football game of the season."

The battle with the Pirates may hold the fate of the Redskins in their attempt to regain the Eastern Division lead. Defeat at the hands of the Pittsburgh club will eliminate the Washington team from all chance of regaining the Eastern lead, and will make their December 4 game with the Giants a meaningless exhibition.

If the Redskins triumph over the Pirates, and the Giants beat Brooklyn on Thanksgiving day, as expected, then the Redskins will move into New York on December 4 with a chance to win the Eastern title. A ties between the Redskins and Giants would give the title to the New York club, however.

Flaherty is contemplating starting Slingin' Sammy Baugh in the Redskins' backfield on Sunday for the first time this season. Andy Farkas, however, will be kept out of the line-up until his presence is needed. Flaherty is hopeful of giving Farkas' bruised foot another week of rest in order that he may be at his peak for the game with the Giants.

Bud Erickson, newly acquired Redskin center, is expected to see much action in both the Pirate and Giant games. Erickson has impressed Flaherty with his aggressive play and his presence has enabled the Redskin coach to return Vic Carroll to a guard post.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

More Than Stars

New York, Nov. 23.—Who are the three outstanding football players of the current campaign? This isn't just a question I thought up; it's something on which I cast a ballot the other day, for each year, for the last three years, the Downtown A. C. has awarded what is known as the Heisman Memorial Trophy to the outstanding performer of the season. The first award went to Jay Berwanger, of Chicago; the next to Larry Kelley, of Yale, and last year Clint Frank, also of Yale, was selected.

VIDMER.

My votes went to Sidney Luckman, of Columbia; Davey O'Brien, of Texas Christian, and Brud Holland, of Cornell. Perhaps I am wrong in my conception of the award, but I am under the impression that it isn't given necessarily to the best football player. The outstanding player isn't always the best. And although it happens that Luckman, O'Brien and Holland are great performers; although it is difficult to imagine any All-American team or all-sectional group that doesn't include all three names, there is another reason behind the selection of each of them.

All three have risen to the heights and national recognition in spite of handicaps. Each one has proven himself something more than just a fine football player; he has proven himself a fine boy, capable of surmounting obstacles which might halt others with less determination in their tracks at the start.

There is Luckman, for instance. For three years he has been the star of Columbia's teams. He has carried the brunt of the attack and defense, punting, passing, running, blocking, calling signals at times, kicking points after touchdowns, and through those three years he has been surrounded by mediocre material. Yet against a background of defeat he has stood out above anything that the winners have been able to produce. It's no trick to look great in triumph, but shining in defeat is a real accomplishment, and Luckman has done that all through his varsity career.

Some Always Come Back

It may be that Sidney is too modest a young man ever to have realized what glory might have been his with a better supporting cast. But, in any event, he never has complained, either by word or look or gesture, and after each successive disappointment he has come back with his fighting spirit still flaming and given all that he had in the next game, and the next.

Davie O'Brien, the pint-sized passer of T. C. U., has had wonderful support. When he fades back to find a receiver for his thrilling throws, he is well protected, and the team before him clears the way when he comes breezing along with the ball in his arms. Yet Slingshot Davey also has a handicap to overcome on his climb to fame. For he's no match in size for the big, rugged giants he plays with and against down in the Southwest sector.

O'Brien weight between 145 and 150 pounds and looks like the mascot when T. C. U. takes the field. But once the whistle blows and the game is on, Davey O'Brien is as big as any of them and the spark of the team that has carried through the campaign undefeated.

His lack of weight hasn't held him back and he has made up in speed, spirit and brain whatever he has lacked in brawn.

Across the Color Line

And finally there is Brud Holland, the Cornell end. They told a story about Brud when he was a freshman at Ithaca. When the squad reported, a Southern coach was shocked to see the Negro among his candidates for this was his first experience in coaching in the North. He went to the head coach and wanted to know what to do about it.

"They look at things a little differently up here," Carl Snavely explained. "Colored boys have just as much opportunity as white boys. You'll just have to put up with it."

But the young Southern coach went away shaking his head, unconvinced that suche things should happen. A week or two went by and one evening Snavely asked how the young Negro was coming along. The freshman coach grinned.

"You know, it's a funny thing," he said, "every time that boy makes a tackle or carries the ball he looks khiter and whiter."

Rookie Has 2-Yard Lead In Race

Shepherd Is Second Leemans Now Fifth White Is Third Race Is Close

Cecil Isbell, Green Bay rookie halfback from Purdue, gained first place among the ground gainers of the National Football League by a margin of 2 yards in the last scheduled game of his team. He has gained 443 yards in 85 attempts, to lead Bill Sheperd, Detroit, who has 443 yards in 95 attempts.

Only 38 yards separate the first five men in ground-gaining. Tuffy Leemans, New York Giants, league leader in 1936, made the biggest gain of the season for one game with 139 yards against Green Bay Sunday to bring his total to 407 yards and climb from eleventh to fifth. "Whizzer" White, All-America recruit with the Pittsburgh Pirates, gained 133 yards during the week to jump from seventh to third with 434 yards. Scrapper Farrell, Brooklyn, is fourth with 410 yards.

A close finish is also developing in the final stages of the race for individual honors in forward passing. Ace Parker, Brooklyn star from Duke, is threatening Ed Danowski's leadership in forward-passing. He has completed 62 tosses out of 138 for 851 yards, the most completed and the most yardage on forward passes in the league. His efficiency average is only 44 per cent, however, compared with 60 completions out of 103 average for 58 per cent for Danowski. Parker has one game left and Danowski two. Jack Robbins, Chicago Cardinals, and Sammy Baugh, Washington, are tied for third with 52 out of 97 and 54 out of 108, respectively.

Gaynell Tinsley, Chicago Cardinals end, has caught 34 passes to again pass Don Hutson, Green Bay, in this department. Joe Carter, Philadelphia, remained in third place with 26 receptions.

Carter also jumped from fourth to third in scoring with 42 points. Clarke Hinkle and Hutson, Green Bay teammates, remained one-two in scoring with 58 and 57 points, respectively. Green Bay has ended its regular schedule, so unless Carter scores three touchdowns in his one remaining game, the supremacy of Hinkle will probably not be challenged.

There have been 37 field goals kicked throughout the league this season, with Ralph Kercheval, Brooklyn veteran, the individual leader with five successful boots. He also has a 45-yard kick to his credit, the longest of the season. Ward Cuff, New York, and Regis Monahan, Detroit, are tied for second with four kicks each.

G. W. to Play D. C. Teams

Double-Header Set With Central Elevens Tonight in Alexandria

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 22.—Junior varsity and midget football teams of the George Washington High School will make a third attempt to fill their double-header engagement with Central High tomorrow evening, when they clash with teams of corresponding weight from the D. C. school in the G. W. Stadium at 7:30. The twin bill has been rained out on two previous occasions.

The George Washington 125-pounders will be bidding for an undefeated season when they clash with the Central midgets. Coached by George Tyler, former Emory and Henry College star, the locals have won out in all four previous attempts, beating Episcopal High twice, and scoring easy wins over St. Alban's 130-pounders, and the Anacostia Boys' Club eleven.

George Washington's junior team, tutored by Willis Benner, ex-Maryland University ace, will be seeking its third victory in four starts against the Central Jayvees, having lost only to the National Training School varsity eleven. The locals hold one-sided victories over Bullis Prep's "B" team and the Fredericksburg High School junior varsity.

Tickets purchased for last Saturday night's game, which was postponed, will be honored tomorrow evening.

Meanwhile, George Washington's varsity eleven wound up heavy work in preparation for Thursday's traditional clash with Washington and Lee at Ballston by staging a spirited workout under the floodlights on the high school field. Blocking and tackling were stressed by Coaches Albert Doran and Willis Benner, who will send the squad through a light signal rehearsal tomorrow.

The Virginia Juniors will bid for 140-pound title recognition in the State on Thanksgiving Day, when they entertain the crack A. N. Cosby eleven, of Richmond, in the feature tilt at the Municipal Stadium. The kick-off for Alexandria's lone Turkey Day grid attraction is scheduled for 3 o'clock.

The locals are undefeated in the State race, and hold the junior title of the city as the result of a 25-6 victory over the Pirate A. C. in last Sunday's championship battle.

The Virginians will go to Richmond for a return game with the Cosby eleven early next month.

N.C. Prepares For Virginia

Tarheels Choice Record Crowd Due 1 Change in Va. Line

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 22.—Much of the color and most of the crowd that set off former Virginia-North Carolina football games are expected to return for Thursday's meeting here between the inter-State rivals of nearly 50 years standing.

Athletic officials predicted Charlottesville's largest crowd of the season with an estimate of 15,000. Game time is 2 o'clock.

Over 200 musicians from three school bands plan to mass their instruments for special pregame halftime performances. From Lenoir High School in North Carolina will come the 85-piece band of schoolboys who have won national fame for their organization. North Carolina will be represented by its 75-piece student band, and Virginia's group of 60 will be on parade.

Making ready for what they believe will be their best performance of the season, the Cavalier footballe rehearsed their assignments in today's last full-length drill of the year. All that stands between them and the kickoff Thursday is a brief kicking and passing warmup tomorrow.

Bac kof the Virginia forces is the best record in several seasons, four victories, three defeats and a tie, but they are hardly expected to upset the powerful Tarheels. The Cavaliers hove won from Washington and Lee, Maryland, William and Mary and Virginia Tech, while losing to Navy, Columbia and Harvard and tying V. M. I.

North Carolina holds victories over Wake Forest, North Carolina State, New York University, Davidson and Virginia Tech and lost to Tulane and Duke and tied Fordham. The comparative scores read, Virginia, 14; Virginia Tech, 6; North Carolina, 7; Virginia Tech, 0.

With the exception of a backfield change, Virginia will present a starting line-up that has been intact all season. Walter Smith, junior letterman, is slated for the right halfback position for his first starting role this year, along with Jim Beverdige, quarterback; Jim Gillette, left halfback, and Harry McClaugherty, fullback.

Navy Coach to Start Hansen In Backfield Against Army

'Giant' Is Effective on Pass Defense Gillette and Burke Also to Open Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 22.—The tentative lineup of the Navy team at the start of the game with the Army in Philadelphia Saturday, was completed when Head Coach Hank Harwick reached a decision to use Harold Hansen and Ed Gillette in the wing back positions and Lou Burke at right end.

The decision to use Hansen, the giant of the backfield, at the start, was based upon the need of marshaling the strongest defense possible against the passes from the good right arm of Woody Wilson and the good left arm of "Huey" Long, the tossing Army backs.

Hansen, who is near 2 inches over 6 feet in height and weighs 215 pounds, did fine work in smacking down the passes of Sid Luckman, in the latter part of the Columbia game, when that player was working desperately to complete a pass which might have tied the game. This made Hansen the logical man to be put in that position against Wilson and Long, whose ability is highly regarded by Hardwick and the other Navy coaches.

However, Monty Whitehead, who is one of the best ball carriers on the squad and a good pass receiver, is likely to be on the job at least half of the game, depending upon how the contest breaks.

There is little to choose between Ed Gillette and Lou Gray, who have been in the other wing back position during the season, but Gillette now has the call on account of his better physical condition, with Gray likely to get plenty of action later.

Lou Burke, who started the season at right end, and who has had some time out on account of injuries, back in shape, will resume his old position, while Dan Baughman, Clarence Corbett and George Ghesquiere may go in at either flank if needed.

Burke is an exceptionally good pass receiver and is heavier than Baughman or Corbett, who were also considered for the flanking job.

Hunting

By Bill Ackerman

We ran across the best definition of a conservationist that has ever come to our attention, a few weeks ago, in a Biological Survey bulletin. Short, but packing a world of meaning in 12 short words.

"A conservationist is a person with a prudent attitude toward natural resources."

ACKERMAN.

Our first thought was to add a few words to this, but with a little thought, and there comes the realization none is needed — in fact, anything further would only detract.

Native grouse are thriving on the slopes of Beech, Grandfather, Sugar and Blood Camp mountains in the Blue Ridge of North Caroline. Avery County, particularly the section around Banner Elk, with elevations of between 3,000 and 4,000 feet in a section very much to the liking of this grand bird. Season opened November 20 and closes December 15.

In the eastern part of the State, near Plymouth, nine big black bears were taken during the week preceding the opening of the season, because they were harassing the farmers. Since, this number has been multiplied many times, and without in any way diminishing the necessary breeding stock. This area, with its hundreds of miles of bogs and woods, provides excellent cover not only for bears, but deer as well. It is estimated 3,000 are taken annually, and they, too, are holding their own without protection.

If several reports from Montgomery County, Md., are to be taken as an average, rabbit and quail shooting is better than it has been for the last five years, and holds forth much promise to local upland hunters living just across the District line.

In southern Maryland, Charles and St. Mary's counties, during the 1937 season, hunters found as good quail shooting as was to be had anywhere in the State. This year, if such a condition is possible, the coveys are larger and more numerous. The same holds true for Calvert County.

Some sections of Prince Georges County seem to be fairly overrun with rabbits, as well as in Anne Arundel. In the latter, particularly along the bay, quail have materially increased, so that the bag limit should not be hard to get if the pot hunters don't get too active again.

J. J. Saunders, just back from a trip to the Alleghany National Forest Section of Pennsylvania, asks that we let him tell about the excellent conditions prevailing in that section and the extremely good chance a hunter has to bag a deer or bear, and even grouse. So, because he was willing to take the time for three large closely-written pages, we're passing it on for what it may be worth, although we have not checked it. Anyone interested, may do so by writing Mrs. Harry Nelson, Gaines, Pa., and where permits and reservations may also be arranged for.

Season opens November 28 and closes December 3. Does only, this year. Herds of five and seven no uncommon sight, as they come out to the salt licks and green pasture late in the afternoon. Are in the open from daylight until something frightens them, when they take to the brush. Dogs are not allowed. Bears are found on the east side of the mountain, only 10 minutes drive from Wellsboro on Route No. 6. Bear and deer signs everywhere, warning motorists to be careful of crashing into the animals as they cross the road.

There is still no modification of the ban on hunting in many sections of Massachusetts, but the season on phesants, grouse, quail and gray squirrels has been extended for six additional days.

Lake Mattamuskeet, in eastern North Carolina, has been the mecca of hunters from all over the East during the past several years, not only because of the good goose and duck shooting, but for the chance to catch the tackle-busting bass that abound in these waters, after the wildfowl limit has been shot. And that doesn't take long in any year.

This year the fishing has been closed for the period of the hunting season, not only as a safety measure, but also to give the ducks and geese a rest on Sundays and after shooting hours.

It would be difficult to compare the release of game and game birds in Maryland, with that of New Jersey, under the present setup, but if the proposed model commission law becomes a reality this winter, within a few years we might reasonably expect to have comparable liberations in Maryland.

Jersey in the past year, liberated 30,656 pheasants, and note this, half of them were raised in State hatcheries. Of the 12,943 quail released, all but about 500 were State raised. Twenty-nine thousand nine hundred fifty-three rabbits were purchased and liberated on open lands. The total acreage under the farmer-sportsman co-operative plan has been increased to 145,267 acres, or approximately 226 square miles of land that was formerly farm land, waste land, streams, ponds and lakes posted against hunting and fishing.

During the 1936 seasons, New Jersey sportsmen took home game valued at $1,277,460 that included 2,034 deer, 102,505 pheasants, 31,144 quail, 535,120 rabbits, 73,274 gray squirrels, 11,340 grouse, 7,819 woodcock, 27,840 ducks and 258 geese.

Maryland sportsmen would think the millennium had arrived if they could take home that much game in any two years.

Malone Decision Appeal Is Denied

Baltimore, Nov. 22 (AP).—The Maryland Racing Commission reaffirmed today its decision barring Thomas Malone, Philadelphia horse trainer, from Maryland tracks.

The case was based on the Bye Bye Will-Uallno "ringer" controversy. The commission held Uallno ran at Pimlico under the name Bye Bye Will.

Malone had appealed on grounds he had been ruled off the track without a fair hearing.

Histrionic Wins Bay Ridge Purse, Feature Event at Bowie

Solar Flight Is Beaten by 2 Lengths

Seabo Rides Victor Pays $5 Ticket Race Is Rough One Landlubber Is Third

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 22.—Histrionic, a hard-running son of Masked Marvel II, made amends for a recent victory that he lost by disqualification when he led a field of eight to the wire in the Bay Ridge Purse, outstanding event on today's program. Oddly enough, Histrionic was the third winner of the day which had been disqualified after taking his most recent race. Tiberius and Butterman also turned the trick.

Histrionic finished two lengths in advance of Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Solar Flight and another length and a half ahead of the Bristol Stable's Landlubber. Histrionic, piloted by Jockey George Seabo, operated in the role of a $5 favorite and was clocked in 1:47 3-5 for the mile and 70 yards over a drying-out track.

The race was marred by rough riding at the first turn, with Apprentice Yarberry, aboard Braxton, the worst offender. Braxton carried Landlubber to the outside fence. Brierton, coupled in the betting with Landlubber, also was carelessly handled and he finally got to the front as the field swung into the backstretch. Solar Flight and Histrionic were close up.

Butterman Victor

At the far turn Brierton began to stop, and first Solar Flight and then Histrionic took up the pacemaking. The latter drew clear approaching the stretch, but Seabo had to continue to drive his mount to hold the lead. Landlubber recovered from his rough trip to close with a good rush.

Butterman, a disqualified winner at Sportsman Park, turned in a victory that was true in the first race. Performing in the colors of W. Durkin, the Peter Hastings colt finished a length in front of Howellville, a long-shot in the six furlong sprint which drew 11 maiden juveniles. Jockey C. Rollins did a good job in the saddle. The winner was a paddock tip and paid an $8.50 mutuel.

Apprentice Yarberry added another winner to his growing string in the second race when he piloted San Antioca home in front of Doplay, a field horse, with Watersplash third. The winner was slow to strike her best stride but came with a rush on the inside to get the lead and won drawing out to pay a $12.90 mutuel.

34 Ex-Big Ten Gridmen Are in National League

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Thirty-four former Western Conference players are now performing in the National Football League. Every team in the league, except the Chicago Cardinals, has one, or more, former Big Ten players on their rosters.

Green Bay and Cleveland each have nine. John Drake, Jules Alfonso, Stan Pincura, Vic Spadaccini, Corby Davis, Ted Livingston, Dick Zell, Johnny Kovatch and Chuck Ream are the former Big Ten men with the Rams. Cecil Isbell, Joe Laws, Hank Bruder, Ed Jankowski, Andy Uram, Herman Schneidman, Milt Gantenbein, Paul Engebretsen and Oakie Miller compose the Packers' Big Ten brigade.

Detroit has five former Big Ten stars—Fred Vanzo, Vernon Huffman, Nick Nardi, Jim McDonald and Regis Monahan. The Chicago Bears have four—Jack Manders, Bob Swisher, Gus Zarnos and Joe Zeller. Philadelphia has three—Bill Hewitt, Clem Woltman and Emmett Mortell.

Washington, New York, Brooklyn and Pittsburgh each have one former Big Ten player under contract. Jim Karcher is with the Redskins; Ed Widseth with the Giants; Ed Golemgeske with the Dodgers and Tuffy Thompson is with the Pirates.

Cotton-Snead Match Planned

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 22 (AP).—A "very attractive" schedule will be arranged for Henry Cotton, England's No. 1 golfer, if he comes to this country, Freddy Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, said today.

Cotton announced in London yesterday that he would come to the United States and play "anybody" provided that the terms would make his trip "worth while."

Corcoran said he planned matches between Cotton and Sam Snead, the leading money winner this year; Ralph Guldahl, the U. S. Open champion, and Paul Runyan, P. G. A. champion, as well as some tournament play.

The terms, he said, would be "worth while."

Deep End Driving in to Win Fourth Race at Bowie

Associated Press.

Deep End (No. 4,) Paragen stable runner, eked out a first place in the fourth race yesterday at Bowie with Ghost Queen (No. 2), Medway Stable mount, in second. Slow Motion (No. 6) was third but failed to get in the picture. It is on the far side of the two leaders. Toddle On (No. 8) comes up fourth

Dear Al:

The stewards here are making every effort to thwart any attempts at running "ringers," stimulating or sponging. Each morning a veterinarian visits every horse scheduled to run that day and thoroughly examines him. In addition, a veterinarian watches every horse in the paddock. The "ringer" complex is so definite that the stewards follow up even the slightest lead.

When Charles F. won an opening race here an official looked him up in the foal book and found that his color did not correspond with the record. However, upon investigation it was found that the jockey club had erred in registration. Willie Shea, trainer and breeder of Charles F., was much put out about the whole thing. He has been prominent in racing hereabouts for years and has a top reputation. However, it is a healthy sign when the officials are on the alert. There have been rumors of the "Jersey mob" being around ready to put something over, but so far these have remained just rumors.

It looks as though Seabiscuit will not have his regular rider this season. Jockey Red Pollard, convalescing from a broken leg, is reported to have walked too soon and he has been ordered back to bed. It is unlikely that he will be able to ride for months.

Walter O'Hara, former president of Narragansett Park, is a visitor here. He is his old smiling self, and his friends lined up to shake his hand in the clubhouse.

Placing Judge Greg Johnson will receive entries here on November 30 for opening day at Charles Town.

Nick Wall says that if Xalapa Clown runs in Saturday's endurance he will have the mount. Otherwise he is through until winter racing. BILL.

First race—Two Aces was off poorly with a similar field last week but made a strong stretch finish to get third money. Has the edge in an open race. Bosonia was right behind the top horse in that heat after showing early speed. May last here. Turkish Brand is very cheap but in good hands.

Second race—Rosarian has been freshened up after his winning effort with fair platers at Jamaica and needs only to be fit to take first money. Inactive set the early pace but failed to last behind Duel last outing. Doesn't meet much here; may last. Chief Evergreen won his last over a bunch of beetles.

Third race—Nellie Bly gave a good account of herself with the better grade juveniles in New York and falls into a good spot with these platers. She is a superior mudder and should like the track. Steam Roller beat older horses last outing in New York, in excellent time. Has a good chance. Banner Girl for show.

Fourth race—Postage Due turned in a good effort with high grade platers at Pimlico and will move way up on this track. Much the best of this field. Winning Chance was a trifle short in a Class D handicap in New York, but looks the best of the others. Zostera can threaten on his best effort.

Fifth race—Grey Nurse is a high caliber stake filly that needed her last race at Pimlico. She should have little trouble beating this mediocre field. Lady Solace was outclassed running with better grade juveniles last outing but figures next best. Both horses of the Shandon Farm entry are possible threats.

Sixth race—Salford displayed a promising return to form in recent New England races and meets the creapest sort of platers. Should win this. Dian won her last, has been freshened up, and will be ready for a good effort. Ladino can better his poor race of last week.

Seventh race—Jack Patches was a beaten favorite his last start with this kind and with Hirsch Jacobs doing the training we'll string along again. Gaurisankar was second to Prowl Monday and running right back he gets a good figure. Copper Tube was a consistent horse this spring and may be returning to form.

Best bet—Postage Due.

WATERSPLASH, slow to begin, came with a terrific rush in closing stages. PASSING EVE hung after improving position between horses in stretch. SLATTERN, forced very wide for racing room, moved up entering stretch, but weakened at end. TONI was forwardly placed throughout and weakened. AUDLEY GIRL had early speed. WATCH OVER challenged BLACK BUN'S pace repeatedly and fought it out gamely. GOLDEN VOYAGE was away poorly, raced wide and closed full of run. FERDINAND had early speed and weakened gradually when kept on rail in heaviest going. The others were outrun.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEEP END, $6.50, $7.20, $3.90; GHOST QUEEN, $12.00, $7.80; SLOW MOTION, $10.60.

DEEP END, in thick of contention from break, rallied to drive to take short lead in midstretch and lasted under good handling. GHOST QUEEN, slow to begin, improved position on outside and closed gamely to be wearing down winner. SLOW MOTION, last away, raced wide and closed with terrific rush to be going fastest at end. TODDLE ON was squeezed back while racing between leaders approaching stretch and fought it out willingly. SIR RALEIGH trailed field under heavy restraint and closed full of run in heaviest going along rail. BENJAM took early speed and faltered. C-NOTE gained lead approaching stretch, while racing wide and stopped suddenly. CACODEMON weakened after being in close quarters leaving backstretch. CACODEMON was not a serious factor.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,200. For all ages. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:40½. Off 3:41½. Winner, Mrs. J. H. McCoole's b. g. (3), by Masked Marvel II—Billie Burke. Trained by J. H. McCoole. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:47 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HISTRIONIC, $5.00, $3.00, $2.60; SOLAR FLIGHT, $4.00, $2.90; LANDLUBBER (entry), $3.30.

HISTRONIC went around horses boldly to get to contention early, took command leaving backstretch and was kept to drive thereafter. SOLAR FLIGHT was forwardly placed from start, was steadied along when outrun by BRIERTON, came between leaders to get to front and closed gamely when displaced. LANDLUBBER was carried out at first turn by BRAXTON and rallied sharply in stretch to close full of run. NO ENDING weakened in closing test. BRAXTON went very wide into first turn. ORCHIDS NEXT failed to rally. BRIERTON stopped from hustling tactics in early stages.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:10½. Off 4:15½. Winner, C. S. Bromley's br. c. (3), by Blue Larkspur—Loved One. Trained by J. J. Bauer. Value to winner, $850; second, $300; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ENDYMION, $17.30, $9.80, $5.80; PRETTY PET, $10.90, $6.60; BAIN MARIE, $5.50.

ENDYMION, first away, set good pace while rated, was placed to drive to shake off BROWN MOTH, swung to outside in stretch and closed with good courage to barely get up. PRETTY PET was forwardly placed throughout, was rated when outrun along backstretch, took command under intermittent punishment inside sixteenth pole, but weakened right at end. BAIN MARIE rallied to take command in midstretch, but stopped suddenly. TRINA came to contention with rush entering stretch and had nothing left. BROWN MOTH forced pace under hustling tactics and weakened. SLUMP had little chance with start. NO SUN was through early.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:42. Off 4:42½. Winner, J. J. McDonald's b. g. Father Walsh Says U. S. Faces Major Test

Our Policies on Trial Germany and Japan Addresses Bankers

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Addressing Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, last night at the Willard Hotel, Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president Georgetown University and regent of its School of Foreign Service, analyzed the present foreign relations of the United States, and declared that the test of American statesmanship must be met in two quarters, our relations with Japan, and our attitude toward the Nazi government.

Speaking at the chapter's first forum meeting for the administrative year on the subject of "Foreign Affairs," Dr. Walsh said, while international law is in total eclipse, and the lights of reciprocated confidence and mutual respect are going out one by one along the highway of international relations, the darkness, however, is being illuminated by the ominous glow of open furnaces and metal at white heat in gun factories, naval bases and munition plants, as every major power resumes its armament program against the dreaded expectation of another war.

"Our days of happy isolation and insulation from the shock of foreign upheavals are gone forever," the speaker reminded, "and we are now committed to an enlarged program of national defence that cannot fail to effect the structure of our tax schedules and put heavy drain on our entire fiscal system—already staggering under a national debt close to 40 billions. We are engaged in a race between the Treasury and disaster!

Central Europe

"After Japan," he warned, "the second major challenge to American statesmanship comes from central Europe. The spectacular expansion fluence raises question that go far uence raises questions that go far beyond territorial and economic considerations and strike at the very roots of public law, public welfare, religious liberty and international peace. It is only plain truth and sheer realism to admit that Germany is the dominant and controlling power on the continent of Europe today, her territory substantially increased, her population augmented by some ten millions, and her military resources superior to her strength in 1914, when she challenged the combined might of the allied powers and resisted half the world for over four years."

Security Club Officers

Newly elected officers of the Security Club of American Security & Trust Co. are Henry S. Kenworthy, president; Kenneth Birgfeld, first vice president; Robert P. Talley, second vice president; Daniel J. Murphy, treasurer; Hazel R. Zoerner, secretary, and the following members of the board of governors, George F. Lingebach, York D. Hollingsworth, Mary Faulkner and Ross W. Morgan. At the first business meeting of the year the officers were introduced, travel motion pictures shown, and a buffet supper served, followed by music and dancing.

Local Debits

Debits to individual accounts reported by banks of Washington for October were 10 per cent above the total for the preceding month, the same month-to-month gain shown by the country as a whole. Last month's debits equaled the earlier high recorded in April. The Standard Statistics Co. index of Washington bank debits for October is computed at 143 (average of 1920-1924 equals 100), against 131 for September.

Prospects for 1939

Optimism concerning business prospects for 1939 was expressed by B. C. Hearn, manager of the Washington district of the Home Insulation Co. of Maryland, upon his return from a national sales conference held in New York City.

Citing facts and figures brought out at the New York conference by Lewis H. Brown, president of Johns-Manville, and other leading building industry figures, Mr. Hearn declared: "Everything points toward further recovery for 1939. Detroit is humming with activity as production on the new automobile models is speeded up; freight car loading recently hit a new high for 1938,

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Custom smelters, matching a decline in the price of copper in the foreign market, today reduced their bids for scrap metal ⅛ cent a pound to 9 cents. It was the third reduction in a week. The new price is the equivalent, on a refined base, to 10½ cents a pound.

The domestic price of refined copper has been 11¼ cents since the middle of October.

Heavy Exports From Canada Lift Wheat

750,000 Bushels in Day No United States Sales Some Corn Demand

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Export buying of 750,000 bushels from Canada, together with crop deterioration advices from Argentina, served to elevate Chicago wheat values half a cent today.

The Canadian purchases mainly consisted of wheat now afloat, but the prices were reported as better than has been the rule of late. No sales of United States wheat or corn to overseas could be confirmed, although it was intimated some corn demand appeared evident.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ½ cent higher compared with yesterday's finish; December, 62⅝@62¾; May, 65⅝@65½. Corn unchanged to ⅜ higher; December, 46⅞@46¼; May, 50½@50⅝. Oats varying from ⅛ decline to ¼ advance. Rye ¼ off to ⅛ up. Provisions showing 2 cents to 7 cents drop.

U. S. Rubber Dividend First In 10 Years

$4 on 8% Preferred Capital Readjusted New Bonds Issued

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 22.—Directors of the United States Rubber Co. today declared a dividend of $4 a share on the 8 per cent noncumulative preferred stock. The dividend is the first paid by United States Rubber in more than a decade, none having been paid on preferred since February, 1932, or on common since April 1, 1921.

Early this year the company readjusted its capital setup, eliminating the profit and loss deficit and issuing, on July 1, $45,000,000 in new first mortgage and collateral trust bonds bearing a 4¼ per cent interest rate, thereby retiring outstanding bonds of a $50,000,000 issue of 5 per cent bonds due in 1947. The dividend is payable December 23 to stock of record December 9. The last dividend paid on the senior stock was a quarterly disbursement of $2 on February 15, 1928.

Remington Restores Pay

J. H. Rand, jr., chairman of Remington Rand, Inc., manufacturers of office equipment, announced today the restoration in full of salaried employes' pay cuts put into effect last summer. The restoration will take place January 1. It will affect between 4,000 and 5,000 employes who received cuts of from 2½ to 25 per cent.

At the same time, following an announcement that orders were up 17 per cent in the first three weeks of November, the Remington Rand directors declared an interim dividend of 20 cents a share on common stock, payable January 3 on stock of record December 3. A similar dividend was paid October 1.

Munich Held No Guaranty of Lasting Peace

German Aims Cited World Trade Results Task of Democracies

New York, Nov. 22.—A summary of views received from foreign sources associated with the National Industrial Conference Board, and made public today, regarding the economic efforts of the Munich Pact, indicates that the following opinions are commonly held among our correspondents:

First, the Munich agreement holds no guarantee of permanent peace for Europe. It is merely a truce. This opinion is confirmed by the fact that, as a reaction to Munich, all nations are increasing their armament expenditures at an accelerated pace.

Second, the growing conflict between the ideologies of the democracies and the totalitarian states will be marked by ever-increasing attempts on the part of the latter to create internal disturbances within the democratic countries. This end will be furthered by the use of propaganda, the fostering of anti-Semitic movements, the encouragement of malcontents, and similar methods, all financed by the totalitarian governments. By this disruptive technique the dictatorships hope to extend their influences in European politics.

Third, and most important economically, Germany will continue to strengthen and enlarge her economic bloc. Having already absorbed Austria and parts of Czechoslovakia, she will now proceed to cement her economic bonds with Hungary, Poland, Yugoslavia and the Balkan states. The integration of Central Europe within the economic and political influence of the German Reich will have important and far-reaching effects upon world trade.

German Methods

Formerly Germany imported certain basic agricultural and industrial products from the democracies. Likewise the annexed territories of Austria and Czechoslovakia sold their products to such countries as the United Staes, Holland, Belgium and others. Now, however, the exchange of goods which formerly took place between the countries of this German bloc with western Europe and the Americas will be largely transformed into an internal trade, since among themselves these countries produce practically all the primary agricultural and industrial commodities.

One way in which the democracies could counteract this situation, according to certain foreign opinion, would be to adopt the German technique of barter agreements. This implies, however, that the United States, France and England must scrap their customary procedure of extending credit primarily for the sale of their own goods; and adopt the German policy of first establishing agreements to buy foreign goods, and then offering their own products in exchange. In addition, the democracies must lower their tariff barriers against imports from Fascist countries and conclude reciprocal trade agreements, if they are to compete for their share of this Central European commerce.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 22.—Renewed strength in Argentine Railroad issues was the outstanding feature of today's stock market. Uncertain European political conditions tended to restrict trading otherwise, although there was a fair inquiry for steel and motor shares. Brewing issues gained slightly and British government funds closed firmer. Overseas bonds were mixed and transatlantics finished fractionally down.

Paris—Stock prices continued upward in the bourse today. Bank of France gained more than 300 francs and Suez Canal moved up about 100. French rentes closed 15 centimes down to 79 higher.

Liverpool—Cotton futures advanced 3 to 4 points today in sympathy with firm Bombay prices and local buying, which was influenced by easiness of pound sterling. Wheat futures moved irregularly, but steadied and closed ¼d to ⅝d net, the absence of pressure from shippers and weakness in the pound sterling were factors in the late rally.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Nov. 22 (AP) (United States Department of Agriculture).—The Boston wool market today was very slow, but prices on a few scattered transactions were firm and within ranges quoted last week. Sales were closed on 12-month basis wools at 70 to 73 cents, scoured basis. Very little interest was being reported in fleece wools. Quotations on fleece wools were being maintained despite the current lack of interest on the part of users.

Bob Burns Says—

I suppose some of these publicity agents out here do stretch a point now and then when writing about their stars, but I want'a tell you some of the actual stories of the trials and struggles of these actors on their way to fame, pret near makes your hair curl.

The other day I was talkin' to one of the stars of a little studio out here and I asked him to tell me the truth about how he got into pictures and he says, "Well, I was a waiter in one of them high priced night clubs in New York. The producer come in there one night and I waited on him and when he got through he had jest enough money to pay his check, but not enough to tip me, so he gave me the lead in his next picture."

Prince Georges Women Honor Mistress Brent

At U. of Md. Ceremony First U. S. Feminist Gen. Hines Speaker

With patriotic exercises at the University of Maryland, the Prince Georges County Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday marked the day on which 300 years ago Mistress Margaret Brent landed at St. Mary's City to practice law in the New World and fight for woman suffrage.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, principal speaker, pointed to the sterling American qualities of Mistress Brent and urged members of the Women's Federation to fight for Americanization of aliens to keep this Nation basically unchanged.

Items for Aliens

"It is a strange thing," he said, "to live in a time when some come to this great country, without first learning the type of government that we possess, and attempt to tell us a better way of life and government. I recommend for those who come here from other countries, as a first step, to pledge allegiance to our flag and country and learn the basic principles of our government before they attempt to change the American way of life."

Gen. Hines and members of the county federation were guests of the university at a review of the Reserve Officers Training Corps unit preceding the exercises.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, and Mrs. Henry Naylor, president of the Prince Georges County Federation, extended greetings.

A brief historical sketch of the life of Mistress Brent, for whom one of the girl's dormitories at the university is named, was given by Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen, of College Park, past president of the State federation.

She pointed out Mistress Brent was the first woman attorney in this country and the first woman to urge the State Legislature to grant a vote to women.

Phyllis Newmaker, Prince Georges County Girl Scout, read Gov. Nice's proclamation. The Rev. B. Andrew Matzen delivered the invocation.

Courts Grant in Doubt

The Prince Georges County commissioners yesterday faced the possibility of losing a 45 per cent PWA grant for the proposed $150,000 additions to the county courthouse at Upper Marlboro, Md., when it was learned that architect's specifications had not been completed.

Terms of the PWA offer require construction be under way January 1. Prior to that time, the commissioners must have specifications completed, send them to the New York PWA regional office for approval, advertise for bids and award the contract.

To speed up drawing of specifications, the commissioners requested the architectural concerns of Upman and Adams and Paul Kea to cooperate on the plans.

The commissioners announced negotiations had been completed with Archbishop Michael J. Curly, of the Archdiocese of Baltimore, for purchase of about five acres adjacent to the courthouse for construction of the proposed additions.

Flying Field Opposed

The commissioners voted to oppose efforts of the National Institute of Aeronautics to open a flying field on the James Fee property at Forestville, Md., on Marlboro pike.

They promised to co-operate with a delegation from Forestville, headed by Roland Sansbury, who voiced opposition to the proposed airport because "it was too close to the school and churches."

Representatives of the board of commissioners will attend a hearing on the application to be held Tuesday night at the Odd Fellows Hall, Forestville, by the State Aviation Commission.

The board approved a resolution to seek authority from the State Legislature in January for agreements between the commissioners and unincorporated communties for providing public services. The resolution, offered by Commissioner Joseph H. Blandford, provides for such an agreement on request of 60 per cent of the property owners in the community affected.

C. L. Wood, county health department sanitarian, was promoted to chief sanitarian at a salary of $2,400 a year. Arrangements were approved for the appointment by the State health department of an additional sanitarian to assist with enforcement of the recently enacted milk ordinance.

Student Scribe Out

The new paper, The Student Scribe, is a four-page tabloid, handset by printshop students as part of a vocational program started this fall at the school.

The Courant, last paper to be published by students at the school, was discontinued in 1933 because of "financial difficulties." Efforts to start a new paper bore fruit when the printing plant was installed, thereby cutting costs of publication.

Besides Balch, members of the staff include Norman Glasgow, business manager; Allen Bowers, managing editor; Jean Frothingham and Yates Dameron, assistant editors; Ellen Stabler and Kaye Southard, news editors; Jane Turner, Patricia McAnallan, Jane Cole and Shirley Wilcox, copy editors; Roy Little, Martha Ann Cotterman and Ralph Dudrow, advertising managers; Flora Shinn and Marie Maier, typing editors; Harry Korab and Walter Longanecker, circulation managers; Flora Benson and Kirk Goines, sports editors.

Virginia Nurse Sacrifices Life To Save Friend

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—Miss Sallie Ware, 50-year-old trained nurse, gave her life for a friend in a domestic-trouble double killing here last night.

Lynchburg police said she jumped in front of Mrs. Carroll W. Blanks, her apartment mate and a tearoom cashier, as the latter's husband fired. Blanks then killed himself with a bullet in the temple, the officer said.

It was said Coroner James Wilkins, a plain case of murder and suicide.

Two bullets from Blanks' gun struck his wife, from whom he was estranged, but the Memorial Hospital here did not believe she was seriously wounded.

The two women resided in an apartment, across the street from the hospital, and, friends told police, Mrs. Blanks had instituted divorce proceedings.

Retroactive Zoning Rules Dropped in Montgomery

9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Ellsworth 4300.

In a move to avert a legal test of the constitutionality of zoning ordinances in Montgomery County, the board of county commissioners yesterday voted to recommend to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission that all nonconforming uses be validated through 1938.

The effect of the move, if approved by the park and planning commission, is to legalize all present illegal zoning operations in the county but to leave the present zoning regulations in effect and to enforce them against all new nonconforming uses.

The motion was adopted by a 3-2 vote, which saw the board once again split squarely along party lines. Three Democrats, Robert D. Hagner, Clay Plummer and Richard H. Lansdale, supported the move, while it was opposed by the two Republicans, Paul M. Coughlan and Frank H. Karn.

The regulation is without force until it is approved by the park and planning commission, but it was indicated at yesterday's meeting that the motion was introduced at the behest of that agency and would speedily be approved.

Would End Controversy

If approved, the new setup would eliminate the controversy now raging between the county commissioners and the park and planning commission on one side and Peter Fritz, proprietor of the Log Cabin Inn near Wheaton, on the other. Fritz, who is operating a dance hall and restaurant on residential property, has a suit pending in which the constitutionality of the zoning act is challenged. Yesterday's ordinance would make the suit unnecessary by legalizing Fritz' establishment.

Indication of the board's intention to enforce zoning regulations after this year was gleaned from their action yesterday in setting two hearings on prpoosed zoning charges for January 10 at 7 p. m. in Bethesda. The petitioner is the Woodmont Development Co., which applied for rezoning from residential A to commercial D of the southeast corner of Wisconsin avenue and Chase avenue, Bethesda, and rezoning from residential A to residential C of eight lots in block A, Westboro, Bethesda.

The board discussed a request of the county police department that a reward of $250 be posted for the capture of the sniper who killed Peter F. Murray and wounded his woman companion last week on a lonely road near the East-West highway, but took no action.

Rezoning Disapproved

Rezoning of the H. Gude property, Ray road and New Hampshire avenue, extended, in Takoma Park, to commercial was disapproved by the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday.

The council rejected the request of the General Conference of Seventh Day Adventists for rezoning of property on Columbia avenue between Pine and Hickory avenues from residential "A" o residential "C." Councilmen Harold Orcut and H. A. Axtell, who form the civic improvement committee, said approval of he rezoning would be "spot" zoning. They pointed out it would permit public garages and the erection of apartments would shut off air, light and view from private homes. Residents in the section strongly opposed rezoning at a hearing recently. Orcut's and Axtell's report also alleged that the change would depreciate the value of adjoining property 50 per cent. An abandoned school owned by the General Conference now sands on the property.

D. D. Lamond, corporation counsel, ruled that the town has the right to restrict use by heavy trucks of Philadelphia avenue. Following complaints of property owners that heavy oil trucks were breaking up the highway, Mayor John R. Adams ordered Lamond to see what steps could be taken. Lamond was told to draw up a draft requesting the company not to use the road.

Harold Mondics and Lester Stauffer were appointed special police for the Washington Missionary College.

Exemption of the rectory of Our Lady of Sorrows Catholic Church on Ethan Allen avenue from taxes was approved.

An ordinance providing for the paving of Hancock avenue between Grant and Sherman avenues at $3.05 per linear foot, was adopted.

The petition filed by David Whidden for the rezoning of both sides of Roanoke avenue between Hudson and Houston street from "A" to B zone was granted by the Montgomery County commissioners, it was announced.

Van Fossens Divorced

Leslie G. Van Fossen, of Kensington, has been granted an absolute divorce in the Circuit Court at Rockville from Mrs. Edna N. Van Fossen, of Washington, on the ground of desertion. The petition stated that the couple was married at Thurmont, Md., September 27, 1937, and has no children.

Albert V. Bryan, attorney for Charles C. Carlin, jr., yesterday filed in corporation court a revocation written and signed by former Representative Charles C. Carlin, of the will dated on August 31, 1937, and filed for probate in the District of Columbia October 18, four days after Carlin's death. The revocation is dated September 15, 1937.

Judge William P. Woolls ordered the Carlin grandchildren also to present to the court any wills they may have, or have knowledge of, on the first day of the December term. This action is to bring into court all interested parties, as the grandchildren were named in the will of August 31, 1937.

Charles Creighton Carlin, a native of Alexandria, who was in the Congress from 1907 to 1919, died on October 14 last in Washington, where he had been living for over a year. On October 18 his son, Charles Keith Carlin, of Washington, filed a will for probate, purporting to be his father's last will and testament in which certain properties were to be held in trust for the widow, Mrs. Lillian B. Carlin, for her life, and at her death to go to him. Carlin and his brother, Charles Creighton Carlin, jr., were appointed trustees of the Alexandria Gazette and executors of the will.

The same day Mrs. Carlin, through her attorney, Judge James Reese Duncan, of Alexandria, filed for probate in the Alexandria Court a will dated August 16, 1892, in which all property is left to her.

Leo P. Harlow, representing Charles Keith Carlin; Albert V. Bryan, representing Charles Creighton Carlin, jr., and Judge Duncan, representing Mrs. Carlin, appeared before Judge Woolls on November 14, the first claiming the deceased was domiciled in the District of Columbia and the will filed in that court should be accepted by the Virginia court, the other attorneys claiming the jurisdiction of the Virginia court.
